

General Topics :: The Holy Spirit

The Holy Spirit - posted by BrokenMan, on: 2007/8/2 0:54

When will we "get back" to truly knowing, honoring and revering the Holy Spirit... knowing Him in all of His fullness, no longer ignoring Him, quenching Him, or grieving Him... this would be the salve that we need... but to draw so close to Him, to really know Him- it requires a holy life, and the singleminded pursuit of a holy life- which is so so difficult..it is the 'narrow way' and the 'hard path'...

Re: The Holy Spirit - posted by sojourner7 (), on: 2007/8/2 11:35

Rejoice in the Lord that His Spirit empowers and enables you to single-mindedly pursue holiness. Make holiness the desire of your heart and you will attain your aim and purpose!! 8-)

Re: The Holy Spirit - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2007/8/2 11:46

Quote:

-----When will we "get back" to truly knowing, honoring and revering the Holy Spirit... knowing Him in all of His fullness, no longer ignoring Him, quenching Him, or grieving Him... this would be the salve that we need... but to draw so close to Him, to really know Him- it requires a holy life, and the singleminded pursuit of a holy life- which is so so difficult..it is the 'narrow way' and the 'hard path'...

It will happen when the 'fear of God' rules in our heart. As long as we consider God a warm, cuddly Santa Claus in the sky we will never get to where we can even serve him. Serve our own religious tradition that we have created for ourselves, perhaps, but not serve a God who requires our whole being. When the 'fear of God' rules in our hearts, it will be reflected in our attitudes, our lifestyle. We will see how undone we are where we are left asking God to teach us how to walk in his will. The only thing difficult in this is to submit our will, our reason, our logic to Him and allow Him to over rule it all.

This is what the LORD is teaching me....
ginnyrose