Can God speak to me through a broken leg? - posted by GoDcOmEdOwN, on: 2009/1/24 23:50

I broke my leg today at the park. I went for the rebound and when i was coming down i landed on someones foot and i heard a pretty nasty crack.

next thing i know im wearing a cast and walking out the hospital with crutches. now here in my room with my foot elevated i cant find reason to complain. I know that God is just at everything that occurs due to the works of his Sovereignty. although it does not make things easier on me to have a fractured leg, neither does it seem like this is the right time for me to be going through this...

the thought came, maybe the lord is chastening me for some dealings with the flesh i had several weeks ago, and certain things i wasn't having dominion over in my life. this belief actually gives me great assurance of who i am in christ. It gives me purpose for having a broken foot. insane??

I think not.. can i not partake in his sufferings this way?

If there is some scripture you brothers can point out from bodily afflictions brought upon his saints, apart from The Apostle Paul and other common ones. I would greatly appreciate it.

pray that my foot would heal well to the glory of the lord.

Much love if you have taken time to read my heart.

Jacob.

Hi Jacob,

It could also be that He just wants your undivided attention. I will pray for your foot.

Trying to get my attention can also be the cause, i agree.. oh how The Lord works.

Thank you for your prayer.

praying for sound knitting of bones.

forgive my presumption, but maybe God wanted to sit you down, so you could get intensive quality time in the Word.

Does that sound crazy to you?....or does your spirit and heart confirm my query?

Unless you were witnessing and spreading the word and suffering for doing so I do not feel it can be counted as partaking of His sufferings. You were playing a game for your own satisfaction and entertainment.

Do not fear though

If you use the time you are 'home bound' to study His Word and search your heart and repent for your sins it will indeed become a life saving accident and one you will be glad to have suffered.

Sorry for your pain but it will heal and then you will be stronger because of it.

Kind regards,
white stone

Hey Jacob,

Im sorry to hear about your broken leg. It must have been very painful. It hurts me just think about a bone snapping in my body.

Jacob...

You have received encouragement and prayer. While I was reading your post Genesis 32 came to me and although you were not wrestling with God, maybe you will take the reverse approach of getting down and serious with our Lord since you already have a limp...

I then noticed your name was Jacob, so it became more fitting, although I am sure you feel it to be not so comforting at the moment.

In His presence you will be comforted.

Blessings,

P.S. Basketball is my favorite sport to play, but I have noticed that growth often times includes sacrifice.

Brian, is your last name Miranda by any chance? because if so, we have the same same last names.

anyway... yeah brother. im very positive that the lords got me where he wants me. im experiencing him in my consequences.

thank you for the thought on scripture, and for your prayers.

I broke my ankle a few years ago pulling nails from the soffit of our house not realizing the ladder was situated on top of a hole covered up by a pile of leaves.

While I was laid up with my broken ankle I was in the process of having to make a critical decision in my life. I had so many demands on me I was constantly on the move and at the same time having to make this decision I was faced with. It was so critical I still don't know if I made the right decision or not. I have had to live with the decision for 15 years now.

It really forced me to be still and it forced those around me who were placing these demands on me to leave me alone.

No, Mira is my wonderful wife's name.

Take care.
