

News and Current Events :: Is the Lord speaking to anyone about 2012?*Is the Lord speaking to anyone about 2012? - posted by CrossCarrier (), on: 2009/11/10 11:23

I've heard many different theories on what will happen during 2012 but, do any of these theories line up with the Bible? Is the Lord speaking to anyone about it? I just found some stuff about it and I'm really curious about it.

Re: Is the Lord speaking to anyone about 2012? - posted by enid, on: 2009/11/10 11:26

What are you talking about?

Re: Is the Lord speaking to anyone about 2012? - posted by sojourner7 (), on: 2009/11/10 11:29

What is a theory?? Just an unscientific guess.
The Mayan calendar ends in 2012, so what?
Why does this alarm you?? Who holds the promise of hope and the future?? Who holds tomorrow?? GOD REIGNS.

Re: - posted by CrossCarrier (), on: 2009/11/10 11:30

I'm not talking about the movie. I'm talking about the year. What do you think of all that Mayan calendar stuff? Has anyone researched it?

Re: - posted by enid, on: 2009/11/10 11:32

Heard about the mayan calendar, but I have not researched it. Not interested.

So, perhaps you could share what you know.

Thanks.

Re: - posted by KingJimmy (), on: 2009/11/10 11:44

I believe that the word of the Lord to me about 2012 is that 2012 is going to come and pass, and all the false prophets that have hooked onto that date as being the end of the world will be proven false, liars, and God will show as the only one who is able to declare the end from the beginning.

Re: - posted by TaylorOtwell (), on: 2009/11/10 11:49

When should we expect the calendar to end? Should it be infinite? I mean, there has to be some year that they ended on. Our desk calendars here in the office end on December 31st, 2009, but nobody is worried about it.

Re: - posted by CrossCarrier (), on: 2009/11/10 12:37

Make no mistake. I'm not alarmed by it and I do not think it is the end of the world. But something could happen. The theory I saw was that of a magnetic reversal which wouldn't end the world but would cause massive flooding. In the Bible it says that in the last days men would faint due to the roaring of the seas. However distorted the truth about it is. I think it may have some Biblical merit to it. The bible says that we should not be ignorant of the times so that that day would not come on us like a thief. I'm just trying to discern the truth from the lies. I'm not afraid. If it happens, then oh well, I'll survive and through God, I'll thrive.

Re: - posted by Leo_Grace, on: 2009/11/10 12:55

Quote:

-----Make no mistake. I'm not alarmed by it and I do not think it is the end of the world. But something could happen.

Forgive me for being cynical, but this calendar thing has even less substance behind it than the Y2K scare, where many smart people made millions off the ignorant.

Something WILL happen: The poor Mayans will have nowhere to book their appointments unless they change over to the modern calendar. :-P

Re: - posted by ccchhrrriiss (), on: 2009/11/10 13:10

Hi CrossCarrier...

Quote:

-----The theory I saw was that of a magnetic reversal which wouldn't end the world but would cause massive flooding.

I suppose that the question should be in regard to just what evidence that these "theories" are based upon. While the Mayans were pretty intelligent when it came to math (compared with contemporaries in the New World at the time), their religions were quite pagan (to say the least).

During a portion of our honeymoon a couple of years ago, my wife and I toured the lost Mayan city of (<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Tulum>) Tulum. Our tour guide was Mayan in ethnicity and a professor from a local university. He explained that the "2012" merely represented the end of a calendar cycle. This professor explained that the Mayans have never placed much importance on the date, other than that it is the end of another calendar cycle. He pointed out that nothing "major" happened at the end of any of the previous Mayan calendar cycles. The only difference is that this is the last cycle that has been found. He explained that this could be due to the mathematicians growing tired (thinking that they had counted far enough), or that they might actually have continued counting with another cycle but that the evidence was lost. Either way, he explained that there is no evidence that the Mayans gave any significance to the year (other than it is just the end of another cycle).

I believe that the Scriptures warn us against giving heed to such things. I Timothy 4:6-7 says, "If thou put the brethren in remembrance of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Jesus Christ, nourished up in the words of faith and of good doctrine, whereunto thou hast attained. But refuse profane and old wives' fables, and exercise thyself rather unto godliness." In this same passage, the NIV calls them "godless myths" and the NASB calls them "worldly fables."

Besides, even in all of the events that will Scripturally comprise the end, we are encouraged to not worry but to keep our faith in Christ Jesus. We should trust in Christ...while we watch...and remain ready...at all times.

:-)