

General Topics :: question in workplace*question in workplace - posted by joliboy11, on: 2012/8/18 1:03

What if you work in a company where they are falsify documents for profit. What is advisable to do?

in my case I just leave without telling the reason to my boss, when I discover that the forms we're filling-in are false infos.
..

any other advice on seeking a job?

Any comments saints?

Re: question in workplace - posted by Miccah (), on: 2012/8/18 1:13

Blow the wistle.

Do what is right in the sight of the Lord, not in the sight of men.

Re: question in workplace - posted by Miccah (), on: 2012/8/18 1:13 double post.

Re: - posted by joliboy11, on: 2012/8/18 1:22

i told my officemates about my reason... but honestly i don't think i can report it to the police if i can't even confront my boss... hope next time my actions would be more fruitful...

Re: , on: 2012/8/18 1:39

You'll never regret listening to God and doing what's right. As for the opposite...

Re: - posted by jimp, on: 2012/8/18 1:58

hi, were you there when the offer was presented? in retail there are offers of 40% off in 60 days and the company rep might instruct the buying company to make sure they get the refund coupons in on time and to falsify them if necessary. if you are selling 1000 units of something on a promo everyone understands the program. the buying company who falsifies still have the inventory on hand and must sell it to open space and open to buy and the selling company sells 1000 units of goods. this is normal in big ticket items.jimp