Following international outcry, China's Population and Family Planning Commission issued an order to ban the use of forced abortion when enforcing its one-child policy. The directive is being hailed as a significant step forward in human rights.

All Girls Allowed founder Chai Ling called it "awesome progress."

"When God told Moses that the Red Sea would part, it did. Last year a prophecy was given that God would end the One-Child Policy in China, and I rejoice that God is already doing it," she said in a statement. "The media's exposure of this injustice has been invaluable, and people in China and around the world are standing boldly against injustice. This has made China understand that they can no longer hide the brutal truth." ...

Awesome! There is a God in Heaven who hears the cries of His people. I was graced to travel to inland China among the poor there, and fellowship the underground church there.....the one with no names, and no money exchanged, or email or addresses.

I call them the "HUNTED CHURCH!". They mostly want to survive in Christ, and live normally, but will not give up their freedom in Christ to do so...so they defy the government, and meet secretly.

This idea of forced abortion is one of the most barbaric edicts ever put upon mankind; akin to Herod's murder of the infants around Bethlehem in the time of Christ. It is truly a miracle that China recanted and abolished this wicked practice. I am grateful for my brothers and sisters there too, who may have some of their suffering relieved.
