how can we be consistent in making a difference between drugs like marawana and other over the counter drugs like codein for lets say pain relief , by using the term pharmacia which encompasses all drugs

Re: pharmakia - posted by brothagary, on: 2014/6/27 6:10

marawana has been used for years as a medicine in the same way opiats and other herbs are used „and to be consistent all must come under the same banner of pharmkia now that marawana is legalised in many places how can we preach against the medicinal uses of that drug and say other pain killers that do similar things and say to the sinner the latter are different and acceptable to god „or do we need to deny the use of all herbs and drugs that do similar things this has bothered me to draw a line like that when the bible draws no line but uses the word phramakia to link drugs and witchcraft „

what does the bible really teach us about medicines and witchcraft „and drunkenness „and idolatry what are your thoughts „ i know some Christians believed in total denial of drugs in medicines „probably because of the verses about pharmakia and sorcery „

what is the Greek word for drunkenness and how can we be biblical about addictions and preach clearly about the sin of addictions idolatry is what seems to me to be the weapon to bring conviction in the area of drug use „but that then opens the door for medical uses of marawana and opiats for certain things what are your thoughts about how the bible expresses the truths about this please no opinions based on experience and how you are brought up or what your church teaches what does the bible say about this

How to differentiate? Use common sense!

It's a bit like asking how to make a difference between surfing the internet for good legitimate purpose and using it to access porn. It's the same word (internet) and same medium, but it's how and what you use it for. Same for drugs. There are good and legitimate use of drugs and bad use of drugs.

There are plenty of alternatives for pain relief to dope. Unless you want to be 'dopey' and off your head, you will avoid it. Mostly it is used for recreational mind altering purposes despite what some would try to convince otherwise.

Re: pharmakia - posted by TMK (), on: 2014/6/27 6:14

I would go by their intended use.

If you are using a drug to get into a psychedelic state or frenzy as part of Baal worship, not recommended.

If you are taking a pain med for a bad toothache, I don't see a problem with it.

Now I do think that we should take as few medications as possible and to try some home remedies in certain situations.

Re: - posted by brothagary, on: 2014/6/27 6:20

now that is exactly what the bible does not say brother with respect it does not say use your common scence and im no exacly how drugs are used for recreation and medicies ,,i dont want to let our hippy culture so to speak influe nce my views what does the bible realy teach about this ,,no comon scence please ,,just bible im not talking about me useing pot either ,, i want to be bibical and not let cultural scence or comon scence or legalisim ,or any thing eles effecet my witness against sin and its definitions

Re: - posted by TMK (), on: 2014/6/27 6:29

gary what exact verse are you referring to?

Re: - posted by Heydave (), on: 2014/6/27 6:31

Well Gary, I think as Christians we often loose sight of our God given common sense. We get lost in 'word play' studying exact meanings of words for the most obvious things, when even unbelievers know what is right and wrong!

It's like we can't see the wood for the trees!!

I'll stick with common sense on this one. There is a good place for studying out meaning of biblical words, but not in this case. It can be used to justify something it was never meant to. I've heard this argument many times over the years and it is nearly always made by those who want to justify their desire to take mind altering drugs, be that marijuana's, Opium, cocaine or anything else.

Re: - posted by Heydave (), on: 2014/6/27 6:40

Surely if you want to be biblical it is like this.

As Christians we are called to be Alert, sober, spiritual minded, etc. You can't do that if you are using drugs to dull your senses. If you are very ill and have little option but to take some pain relief, that is a different case and motive. Even then you will choose something that has the minimum effect on your clarity of mind.

As for unbelievers, they are in sin anyway (being in unbelief) and there many be different reasons they take or are addict ed to drugs. The root issue here is for them to be reconciled to God and then they won't want or need to take drugs to du ll their minds to avoid reality.

Re: - posted by TMK (), on: 2014/6/27 6:45

In Bible times, and and I am sure still today, drug use was associated with black magic, divination and other dark practices.

So again I think cultural context is important here. Was the scripture forbidding the use of all medication, or all the dark practices in which certain drugs were used?

Re: - posted by dolfan (), on: 2014/6/27 7:43

Gary, the Bible tells us to be sober-minded. Dave pointed that out. It also says be circumspect, not foolish but wise, redeeming the time for the days are evil. It says sow to the Spirit and not to the flesh. To pursue holiness.

If a drug tends to make me not sober-minded, foolish, unwise, and is a pursuit of the lust of the flesh, lust of the eyes or the pride of life, then it is of the world and I need to avoid it.

Marijuana makes a person unsobber. It leads to foolishness of thought, it promotes it. The entire culture of its use has Cheech and Chong and the characters from That 70s Show as exemplary. It is used with the purpose of sowing to the flesh.

But, if I take Pepto Bismol for my stomach's sake, I'm none of these. I just need something to relieve my bellyache and whatever else that stuff is good for. It doesn't make my mind operate differently, unsobberly. I'm not going to sit around a table with friends and a liter of Pepto and giggle about ladies in swimwear.

There are "medicines" that people take for legitimate ailments that DO, however, take them down the road of foolishness and flesh. This is where the pharmaceutical industry and doctors are making hay in America. Mood altering drugs, prescribed for mood conditions, marketed as cures and treatments, and are positively devastating. They turn people into addicts, and people who are sowing to the flesh already have no defense. People who would walk in the Spirit and take them for mood conditions are, in my view, walking in the flesh, but I cannot be too careful in rushing to judgment on that -- it is my opinion only. Certainly, it is a baited trap. And, the same can be said for opiate based pain killers to a large extent; they are vastly overused and turned to quickly by even Christians. This is distressing. It is bondage.

We need perspective. You are looking for a bright line to draw. Not that there isn't a line, but it is not necessarily a black and white one where all drugs are on one side of it and none are on the other. That isn't biblical, either. Even Paul told Timothy to have a little wine for his stomach. A little. Why? Because in excess there is mockery and rage and foolishness. I submit that the first sip taken for other than the strict need is exactly that, foolish and sowing to flesh. But, it isn't a line where the thing itself--wine in Timothy's case-- is swept in where it is a useful treatment of a physical condition that does not alter the mind.

Quote:
-----For when they speak great swelling words of emptiness, they allure through the lusts of the flesh, through lewdness, the ones who have actually escaped from those who live in error. While they promise them liberty, they themselves are slaves of corruption; for by whom a person is overcome, by him also he is brought into bondage. For if, after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled in them and overcome, the latter end is worse for them than the beginning. For it would have been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than having known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered to them. But it has happened to them according to the true proverb: "A dog returns to his own vomit," and, "a sow, having washed, to her wallowing in the mire."

If it is something that overcomes me, it has enslaved me. Period.

The difference is whether you are overcome by it. Is anyone overcome by Advil? By Pepto? By Insulin? No.

Marijuana, yes. Tobacco, yes. Some prescription drugs, yes.

Quote:

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

Abstain from all appearance of evil.

And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it.

Abstain from even looking evil. I wouldn't take medical marijuana if someone paid me a kazillion dollars to do it or if it was the only "cure" to some ailment I had. Why? Because I am not even going to look like I am doing evil. Look at what Paul says immediately after--our whole spirit and body to be preserved. So this isn't a gnostic kind of life where we can have spirits that are preserved and just let our bodies sin it up.

That's not a systematic theology, but those are some Scriptures that I immediately thought of.

Re: - posted by TMK (), on: 2014/6/27 10:09

Here in NC the state lawmakers just passed a bill to allow the use of CBD oil which is extracted from the marijuana plant and contains no THC.

It has shown great benefit in treating children with terrible seizure disorders. You see these kids on the news and it rips your heart out. I can't imagine having to deal with that on a daily basis. You can bet if I had a child with that condition I would have been lobbying hard for passage of that bill.

So even when it comes to certain uses of marijuana for true medical reasons I am not opposed. Nor would I be opposed to narcotic medication for severe pain control even though they are derived from the same plants (coca and poppy) that have been so destructive to society.

It comes down to legitimate use that does not lead to sin.

Re: - posted by Oracio (), on: 2014/6/27 15:41

I think some very good points have been made on the side of confronting the sinful use of drugs. God's Word is very clear on being sober and vigilant and being filled with the Holy Spirit as opposed to being filled with intoxicating drink. When out on the streets evangelizing I sometimes come across professing Christians who justify the use of recreational marijuana. It seems we may be seeing more of that from churches in the coming days as the current apostasy increases rapidly.

Re: - posted by havok20x, on: 2014/6/27 16:51

Oracio,

It is easy to do. When we don't know the Word, we can be tossed around by every wind of doctrine.

Re: - posted by brothagary, on: 2014/6/27 17:34

tmk I wasn't referring to your post at my first comment but heydave

I don't like common sense because ,,that won't work when I tell a sinner to repent of sin but use his common sense regarding pot use be it for pain or relaxation,, which is the common use ,,,,,and the bible says one who only has milk does not discern between good and evil properly ,but only the mature ,,so I can't tell the young Christian to use common sense im just asking a few questions in a bunch of superette issues ,,don't get me wrong ,,I know by new testament well and our call for sobriety ,,that really has nothing to do with my concerns in preaching and defining sin because the average uses of recreational pot that I work with and know in most cases will claim that he is sober most of the time and can work and do every thing normal, in the same way he would after a few beers and or a few pain killers for strong back pain

im about to go out so I will address you guys a little more clearly later thanks for your comments

tmk „you raise the questions about phramakai that I want others to address bibically and not opinionally because when we look at two drugs like pot and codein for strong pain relief in a state that has both legalised „it would be hard to preach against one as a sin and the other as acceptable „„I know of a woman who has wreck her spine and stumbles everywhere on a walking stick „„consigned to morphine for the rest of her life „ has found pot to be a better treatment and much much less intoxicating and less harsh on her mind and body

these issues make it difficult to address bibically with balance any more ideas on what the bible alludes to in cases like this as well as the other points

please if you can try to draw from scripture because I want that to be the weapon to bring correction

what does pharmakia mean and how is this relevant to medicine

Re: - posted by Heydave (), on: 2014/6/28 17:34

Gary, let me qualify and explain my comments.

In my experience most people and especially believers have enough 'sense' and wisdom to know that taking any drugs for recreational purposes is foolish and a dangerous road to follow. Your point about the use and distinguishing between drugs for medicinal use is a different issue.

I think that your desire to find a scriptural basis for preaching against the sin of pot smoking to unbelievers is probably not the right path to go down. My earlier point is that they are dead in sin anyway and their whole life (not just this one thing) is estranged from God. They need to hear the gospel and repent and be reconciled to God. Then once reconciled they will come into the wisdom of God and have the desire to be sober, etc and not want to be enslaved to anything such as dope. This is my experience with those who were smokers. They did not need to be told not to smoke, their conscience was awakened after they were born again and they desired to give it up. It was pointless telling them before they were saved that they should not smoke.

Trust this is clearer and explains what has been said by many about the scriptural principles that we then use biblical common sense to understand what is acceptable or not. An example would be gambling. Nowhere in the bible does it say gambling is sin, but we all know it is wrong. Why is this? I would suggest that it is because we know that covetousness is a sin and gambling is love of money that often leads to addiction and bondage. So we don't need a specific verse that says 'thou shalt not gamble' or 'thou shalt not smoke dope'.

God bless you.

Re: - posted by brothagary, on: 2014/6/28 19:37

yea dave I see what your saying „but like you said it might be most have the scence,, but im talking about the minority t hat don't have the scence

they do need to hear the gospel and repent ,,,repent from what sin ,and towards god ,,,,if they don't believe cigertes and pot smoking are sin „they say you need god that good for you I don't need god pot smoking is not sin realy im not hurtin g any body brother I know you say in your experience ,,,but that is often different for different people in my experience I wasted ten years smoking pot wile after being born again „because I could not find where in the bible it was sin „ignoring „the small voice of conviction „it came down to idolatry and it it took me a long time to understand what idlolarty was brother I wasnt looking for the particular verse that said cannabis sativa is sin if you smoke but what is the best biblical way to point out sin as sin saying to these gyes that smoking pot is witchcraft „doesn't have any effect ,excepted make look like im talking trash brother dont you think the gospel is also calling a person to repent of sins ,,,particular sins rather then glossing over si ns and not explaining what they are blessings to ya

Re: - posted by TMK (), on: 2014/6/28 19:53

Hi Gary

When scripture uses the word pharmakeia it seems to be in association with dark arts, I.e. the use of drugs in conjunctio n with idolatry or necromancy etc.

If you are looking for a definition of what pharmakeia is in scripture I don't think it is there. We don't even know what drug s they were using in association with those dark purposes. Probably a hallucinogen of some sort but scripture does not say.

So we have to be guided by other scriptures regarding sobriety etc. I think we also have to weight benefit vs. harm. It's easy for those of us who don't suffer from intractable pain to tell those who are that they shouldn't take a certain drug, ev en a drug like cannabis.

brother im not saying that a sinner can stop sinning before he comes to Christ ,,,,but he can be convicted of sins and se e his sinfulness even in what he thought was harmless fun

I realise conviction can come after coversion „ but I don't think that is the normal way gods spirit works „tho that was my conversion ,,,,,,if we look at scripture both john the baptise and jesus preach againsts all manner of sins before the gos pel was proclaimed ,,,,the people should have been convicted and ready to receive

yea I agree with you tmk ,,,, it strange to me that Christians would uses pharmaika to sugest that people who take drugs are sinning ,,,it seems out of context regarding sorbrity ,,,that would work but if a user is using very small amounts and is still sober and not druken ,,,then its hard to use that as a tool to convict your last paragraph I agree with very hard ,,,when many of the same people who say you cant uses cannabis say morphine or codein is fine ,,,,,where is the logic and common scence in that

Re: - posted by Heydave (), on: 2014/6/29 5:10

Gary,

Quote: "in my experience I wasted ten years smoking pot wile after being born again ,,,because I could not find where in the bible it was sin ,,,ignoring ,,,the small voice of conviction ,,,it came down to idolatry and it took me a long time to understand what idlolarty was"

I understand we all come in at different places and have different reactions and experiences. However I think what you said here shows you probably were given a wrong understanding of the gospel. This is the issue I am addressing and I think colours your thinking in now wanting to warn others.

True life in Christ is not about looking for laws in the bible that prohibit or allow certain behaviour. This is legalism in either direction. Certainly we read the bible to see how God expects us to live, but not from the view of I can do what ever I like as long as the bible does not explicitly prohibit it. We see what is God's will for us in many passages of scripture and then apply that to all circumstances and activities of our life, wanting to please Him and walk in the Spirit with all wisdom and sobriety, having the mind of Christ in all things.

Have a good day!

Re: - posted by brothagary, on: 2014/6/29 7:01

you misunderstand my intenions compleatly if you think that dave ,,,that is the exact opasite ,,,the verry opasite and basicly not even the context of why i asked the questions not to justafie sin as you have said ,,,i dont see how you could imagine i was saying that i am a product of comnscence as you put it ,,,with out a paster or preacher ,,,i was converted with a bible and the holy spirit ,,,and my nature was transformed from an angry agresive meth addict ,,,to a soft broken wepping joyfull gratfull saint ,,,but i strugeld with pot and cigertes ,,,becasue i was the only one teaching me the bible ,,,me and my comonsence brother the last paragraphe you posted is realy contradidting ,,,, you said ,,,,"True life in Christ is not about looking for laws in the bible that prohibit or allow certain behaviour. This is legalism in either direction.

yet jesus gave us writtern laws by his mouth and the apostals mouths,,and jesus exorts us if we love him we will keep them ,,,that is true christianity,, not just relying on experence and concence and comonsence then you contradict that with We see what is God's will for us in many passages of scripture and then apply that to all circumstances and activities of our life, wanting to please Him and walk in the Spirit with all wisdom and sobriety, having the mind of Christ in all things.

gods will is to keep his comands the laws from his lips his writtern laws ..his will was to do things pleaesing ,,and abstain from the fleshly desires ,, brother dont misunderstand me and think im preaching keeping the law of moses brother those questions io asked didn not have any thing to do with leaglisim of as you seem to think that nor from the wi ld usumtion the view of I can do what ever I like as long as the bible does not explicitly prohibit it i allready know the bible is explist on certaint things ,,so i was asking if any one knew how to bibicaly deal with certaint si tuation in witnessing christ and the apostals teachings when it is not explisitly comanded for me i found out that even have the smalest adiction was a form of idolary ,,and god wants to cleans us from all our id ols ,,even the idols of our hearts ,,the old testament made that clear ,,so for me realy the old testament in this instance s howed me my sin for what it was brought clear conviction and the new covenrt blood set be free calling pot and cigertes pharmakia and socrcery ,,did nothing but make me question how people came to that conclusio

I haven't read all the posts in this thread, if someone has already this point, I apologize.

Marijuana will become legal, there is too much money to be made off of the taxes... but that aside, for Christians, it will b lisa so are you saying for a christian that a littel pot is of just like a glass of wine

i believe pesonly and i will tell christians ,,even a little of this halusnagen will make one supeptable to demonic opresion draw that from experience

work that one out with fear and trembleing ,,and hear from one who has smoked that shit for years ,and i feel the holy sp god used some of derik prince to help me see that and a dream ,,and that has been one of the only dreams that i feel th

Re: - posted by Heydave (), on: 2014/6/29 16:07

Gary,

I am sorry if I misjudged you. As I said I do understand that we all come from different backgrounds and experiences and do not always see some things as clearly and quickly as we might.

I was only picking up on what you said was the reason you continued to smoke dope for 10 years, which was you could not find a scripture to tell you not to.

I guess I did misunderstand you, as I understand the Lord showed you it was idolatry which set you free. I thought you were asking for scriptures showing a direct reference to not taking any drug.

Anyway I rejoice in what God has done in your life. Also I agree with your last post. Maybe this is the approach you need to use in witnessing, along with your personal testimony.

Re: pharmakia - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2014/6/29 17:39

OK, my thoughts are all over the map this afternoon, so here goes.

Thought #1:

I have not read closely all posts in regard to your question but I do have my ideas on this subject.

God says in Genesis 1:29: "And God said, Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed, which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree, in the which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat."

I gather from this that every plant that bears seed has some value to humans, whether it be for food or medicinal use. The problem we see today is (1) we are ignorant of all the benefits plants provide for mankind and (2) what is known can and will be misused. This is through no fault of God, the creator, but the perversion that resulted when man chose to disobey God. From that point on the devil worked to pervert everything God did.

Based upon the fact that God created marijuana I can see the possibility of it being used to benefit humans.

Hmmmm....but I do wonder about poison ivy, poison oak...must be still ignorant. Oh, I have heard that birds use poison ivy to protect their young from snakes but they are not humans...

Doing a check on the web I find there are few species of plants that do not produce seeds. Interesting.

Man has not plumbed the depth of the blessings contained in the vegetation that surround us.

Thought #2:

RE: common sense...Got a question: what is the difference between common sense and wisdom that Proverbs talks a lot about?

Re: - posted by brothagary, on: 2014/6/29 19:25

dont be sorry dave ,,i praise god to for his mercy i can fully understand why you would say what you did reagring legalism and abusing liberty due to lack of clear cut commands ,,it just wasnt the case in this instant ,,but is a issue every where especially in australia

bless you brother

Re: - posted by brothagary, on: 2014/6/29 19:50

that is the great scripture ginny that satan uses to keep christians in bondage ,,,,it lliteraly says food ,,,,,,dont try any ha sh cake ,,but the seeds are full of protein

if it is used as a medicine by a baby christian for comon aliments for back pain neck pain ,,it will likely be abused due to t he extreemly addictive nature of pot and the lake of mature common scence and wisdom ,that all baby christian have

Re: - posted by roadsign (), on: 2014/6/29 22:17

I fear that this discussion is missing the mark.

We'd do far better to consider the crisis in our society - the reasons WHY there is so much substance abuse - be that ille gal meth in youth, or prescribed opiates in the elderly (morphine, etc).

An addictions counselor put it this way, "Youth take these substances to self-medicate, to help them cope with pain - th e pain of anxiety, rejection, meaninglessness, and so forth. Something in their environment has gone terribly wrong. The y truly do need relief, and they take these substances to help them cope. But unfortunately it turns around and bites the m.

Indisputably the epidemic of substance abuse closely corresponds with the absence of healing grace and love in people' s lives.

But if Christians are preoccupied with the letter of the law, what's right or wrong, black or white then they will be less incl ined to empathize with those who suffer secret agonies caused by sin-sickness.

It may be those who would never consume a wrong substance are guilty of the greater sin: The failure to show the worl d what grace is.

Re: - posted by brothagary, on: 2014/6/29 23:07

with all respect sister no one has said a drug user is a worst sinner then others or even a christian not doing what he s hould by bring light to others sister you may think this discusion is missing the mark which is sin ,,because no here is mentioning the reasons why pe ople are drug adicted ,,,,who said we or i have not concidered the crises in socity ,,that is a blanket gerelisation of us in whom you know nothing ,of what we know and our relationships with drug addicts and brokenness or compassions for re aching the lost sister dont confuse the leter of the law of moses ,,with the teachings of christ and the apoatsals ,, and compare who you do not know nor having never met with leglaists ,,that would be missing the mark on your part with out doubt sister you mention adictions counclers ,,,,why consult the dead or the world system to get worldly wissom for counclin g ,,at best it cant produce faith and true repentance and true victory over sin

god said the wisdom of this world is foolishness in the sight of god ,,,,my wife as been a councler for many years ,and n ow sees the total contradiction towards the councling of the holy spirit lets look to the counsel of scripture ,,and how jesus and the apostals delt with adictions like drunkeness or intoxication ,,we would do far beter doing that ,, this topic was really dealing with only one or two aspects of drug use,,,how to show the sinner that is truly sin by using the sword of the spirit wich is the word of god ,,that doesnt mean there arent others problems and situations that cant be delt with and talked about ,, this topic is not intended to minimise any other factors of dealing with and understanding drug adictions

you said

An addictions counselor put it this way, "Youth take these substances to self-medicate, to help them cope with pain - the pain of anxiety, rejection, meaninglessness, and so forth. Something in their environment has gone terribly wrong. They truly do need relief, and they take these substances to help them cope. But unfortunately it turns around and bites them

you know adultery and fornication stealing ,partying and other sins are often used for the same reasons as above

but it is still rebellion and sin and detestable to lord ,,minimiseing it and sugar coating sin is not what jesus did nor did the apostals do this ,,the world does that in this generation ,,and that is why we have no awakenings and revivals like in the past when sin was made to be exceedingly sin full ,,paul said it was the law that did that for him ,, paul and peter and john for instants called sin out and made it seem very sinfully ,,not one mention of why people sinned in that way ,,like saying they just wanted to be loved so they sinned ,,or just wanted to escape pain ,so they sinned,,they never mentioned that onces in there counsels and teachings ,,so even it is true it was relevant to how they preached and taught and delt with the depraved society

so sister with love ,must say your comment has really missed the mark of scripture ,and our example setters jesus and the apostals and drew from the world system wich is not from god ,,the wisdom of this word is devilish and deceiving offering no victory over sin but a mere bandaid ,, which may only be of a temporal help and can and does actually hinder the gospel ,,my wife still struggles with the contrasts and contradiction that the world taught her in counseling for 25 years of drug and alcohol and marriage counseling
