

News and Current Events :: Catholic Church denounces Da Vinci book

Catholic Church denounces Da Vinci book - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2005/7/23 13:25

[Image: https://www.sermonindex.net/images/forum/2004/may/featured_news.gif]

THE Roman Catholic Church in England and Wales begins a campaign today against Dan Brown's bestselling The Da Vinci Code, denouncing it as logically and historically flawed and a risible hoax.

A new Catholic website aimed at Da Vinci fans is timed to coincide with today's feast of St Mary Magdalene, depicted in the book as the sacred vessel, or Holy Grail, who bore Jesus Christ's children. The site, designed by the Catholic Enquiry Office (CEO), a national office of the Church, includes biographies of St Mary, Bible extracts, prayers, articles, web links, images and a cake recipe.

It includes question-and-answer sessions listing alleged historical, artistic and religious errors in the book, such as its depiction of the Catholic organisation Opus Dei.

Re: Catholic Church denounces Da Vinci book, on: 2005/7/24 14:02

And just recently the RCC has convinced the Church of England Anglican of the sinlessness of Mary and they've adopted the teaching.

Throw out Harry Potter & Da Vinci then throw in goddess worship.

Compromise seems to work everytime. :-(