

SermonIndex Announcements :: A VISION OF HELL by Greg Gordon

A VISION OF HELL by Greg Gordon - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2006/12/3 1:14

[Image: <https://www.sermonindex.net/images/avisionofhell.gif>]

Download this article as a pdf document and freely distribute here.

A Vision Of Hell

by Greg Gordon

Somber accounts of the reality of eternal punishment

THE CRY FROM HELL

Right now if we could put a megaphone into hell we would hear a resounded message "send!". When a soul realizes that he cannot be freed from such torment his immediate plea is for his family, friends, neighbours to be warned of such a place. In Luke 16 we see the story of the Rich man and Lazarus and when the Rich man is in eternal torment he cry's out: "I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house. For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment." This is the cry of the damned "send!". Are we numb to this cry from hell dear Christian? Right now you can hear it millions of damned souls crying out send someone, tell someone, you have your entire life before you. We need a vision of hell amongst our modern day, lazy, undisciplined Christianity. We have a "cloud of witnesses" that have gone before us that were fully convinced of this truth and warned men of the judgement to come. Hear the words of Christ: "Then He shall say unto those on the left hand, "Depart from me, you cursed ones, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels!" Oh does that not shake your soul? or are you deafened by selfishness? deafened by worldliness? deafened by materialism? Will you not today hear the cry from hell.

Thomas Boston three hundred years ago wrote of the misery of the damned: "They shall never more taste of His goodness and bounty, nor have the least glimpse of hope from Him. They will see His heart to be absolutely alienated from them, and that it cannot be favorable towards them; that they are the party against whom the Lord will have indignation for ever. They shall be deprived of the glorious presence and enjoyment of God— they shall have no part in the beatific vision; nor see anything in God towards them but one wave of wrath rolling after another! This will bring upon them overwhelming floods of sorrow for evermore." Oh! hear the warning of J.C. Ryle in response to a everlasting hell: "What would you say of the man who saw his neighbor's house in danger of being burned down, and never raised the cry of "fire?" What ought to be said of us as ministers if we call ourselves watchmen for souls, and yet see fires of hell raging in distance, and never give the alarm? Call it bad taste, if you like, to speak of hell. Call it charity to make things pleasant, and speak of smoothly, and soothe men with constant lullaby of peace. I have not read my Bible. My notion of charity is to warn men plainly of danger. My notion of taste in the ministerial office, is to declare all the counsel of God."

MILLIONS OF AGES

J.C. Ryle a non-conformist from the 18th century writes on hell: "The punishment of hell shall be most severe. There is no pain like that of burning. Put your finger in the candle for a moment if you doubt this, and try. Fire is the most destructive and devouring of all elements. Look into the mouth of a blast furnace, and think what it would be to be there. Fire is of all elements most opposed to life. Creatures can live in air, and earth, and water; but nothing can live in fire. Yet fire is the portion to which the Christ-less and unbelieving will come. they will be 'cast into the lake of fire.' The punishment of hell will be eternal. Millions of ages will pass away, and the fire will never burn low and become dim. The fuel of that fire will never waste away and be consumed. it is 'unquenchable fire.' O reader, these are the sad and painful things to speak of. I have no-pleasure in dwelling on them. I could rather say with the apostle Paul, "I have great sorrow." But they are things written for our learning, and it is good to consider them. They are part of that Scripture which is all profitable, and they ought to be heard. Painful as the subject of hell is, it is one about which I dare not, cannot, and must not be silent." What a fearful thought of an eternal hell! Millions and Millions of years but never relief or rest. Perpetual ongoing torment unceasing, never ending, eternity, eternity, eternity in hell!

C.H. Spurgeon spoke on hell much being faithful to warn the masses: "In hell there is no hope. They have not even the h ope of dying--the hope of being annihilated. They are forever--forever--forever lost! On every chain in hell, there is written 'forever'. In the fires there, blaze out the words, 'forever'. Above their heads, they read, 'forever'. Their eyes are galled and their hearts are pained with the thought that it is 'forever'. Oh, if I could tell you tonight that hell would one day be burned out, and that those who were lost might be saved, there would be a jubilee in hell at the very thought of it. But it cannot be--it is 'forever' they are cast into the outer darkness." Christopher Love uses an illustration to try and help us understand what eternity means: "Suppose all the mountains of the earth were mountains of sand, and many more mountains still added thereto, till they reached up to heaven, and a little bird should once in every thousand years take one (grain of) sand of this mountain, there would be an innumerable company of years pass over before that mass of sand would be consumed and taken away, and yet this time would have an end; and it would be happy for man, if hell were no longer than this time; but this is man's misery in hell, he shall be in no more hope of coming out after he hath been there millions of years, then he was when he was first cast in there; for his torments shall be to eternity, without end, because the God that damns him is eternal." Dear reader if you feel lacking in this vision of hell cry out to God for it, plead for it, Oh we need this burden again tears over the truth of hell. Leonard Ravenhill spoke of this burden-less condition: "You can tell how bankrupt a preacher is when he prays in the pulpit they say nothing, 'Lord bless us today, amen.' Forget it! A parrot could do better in some churches. I believe to quote Whitefield, if I am going to preach on heaven I should live there a week before I preach. If I am going to preach on Hell I should get soaked in hell for a week. Bring the atmosphere of heaven, bring the atmosphere of hell! When we do that the house of God will not be empty."

A LOST SOUL SPEAKS

John Bunyan the famous baptist preacher before his conversion attempted suicide and was given a vision of hell of which he recounts of a soul there speaking of hell: "Our miseries in this infernal dungeon are of two sorts; what we have lost, and what we undergo. And these I will name under their several heads. First then for what we have lost. Here we have likewise lost the company of saints and angels, and in their place have nothing but tormenting devils. Here we have lost heaven too. The seat of blessedness. There is a deep gulf betwixt us and heaven, so that we are shut out from thence forever. Those everlasting gates that let the blessed into happiness are now for ever shut against us here. To make our wretchedness far yet more wretched, we have lost the hope of ever being in a better state, which renders our condition truly hopeless. The most miserable man upon earth still has hope. And therefore, it is a common proverb there that were it not for hope, the heart would break. Well may our hearts break then since we are both without hope and help. This is what we have lost; which, but to think on, is enough to fear and rend and gnaw upon our miserable souls forever. Yet, oh, that his were all! But we have sense of pain as well as loss. And having showed you what we have lost, I am trying to show you what we undergo. And first, we undergo variety of torments: we are tormented here a thousand, nay, ten thousand different ways. They that are most afflicted upon earth have seldom any more than one malady at a time. But should they have the plague, the gout, the stone, and fever at a time, how miserable would they think themselves? Yet all those are but like the biting of a flea to those intolerable, pungent pains that we endure. Here we have all the loathed variety of hell to grapple with. Here is a fire that is unquenchable to burn us with; a lake of burning brimstone ever choking us; eternal chain to tie us; here is utter darkness to affright us, and a worm of conscience that gnaws upon us everlastingly. And any one of these is worse to bear than all the torments mankind ever felt on earth."

"But as our torments here are various, so are they universal, too, afflicting each part of the body, tormenting the powers of the soul, which renders what we suffer most unsufferable. In those illnesses you men are seized with on earth, though some parts are afflicted, other parts are free. Although your body may be out of order, your head may yet be well; and though your head be ill, your vitals may be free; or though your vitals be affected, your arms and legs may still be clear. But here it is otherwise: each member of the soul and body is at once tormented. The eye is here tormented with the sight of the devil's who do appear in all the horrid shapes and black appearances that sin can give them. The ear is continually tormented with the loud yellings and continual outcries of the damned. The nostrils smothered with sulphurous flames; the tongue with burning blisters; and the whole body rolled in flames of liquid fire. And all the powers and faculties of our souls are here tormented. The imagination, with the thoughts of the present pain; the memory lost with reflecting on what a heaven we have lost, and of those opportunities we had of being saved. Our minds are here tormented with considering how vainly we have spent our precious time, and how we have abused it. Our understanding is tormented in the thoughts of our past pleasures, present pains, and future sorrows, which are to last for ever. And our consciences are tormented with a continual gnawing worm."

"Another thing that makes our misery awful is the extremity of our torments. The fire that burns us is so violent that all the water in the sea can never quench it. The pains we suffer here are so extreme that it is impossible they should be known by any one but those that feel them. Another part of our misery is the ceaselessness of our torments. As various, as universal, and as extremely violent as they are, they are continual, too. Nor have we the least rest from them. If there were any relaxation, it might be some allay. But this makes our condition so deplorable that there is no easing of our torments."

nts, but what we suffer now we must for ever suffer. The society or company we have here is another element in our misery. Tormenting devils and tormented souls are all our company; and dreadful shrieks and howlings, under the fierceness of our pain, and fearful oaths, is all our conversation. And here the torments of our fellow sufferers are so far from lessening our misery that they increase our pain. The place in which we suffer is another thing that increases our sufferings. It is the abstract of all misery, a prison, a dungeon, a bottomless pit, a lake of fire and brimstone, a furnace of fire that burns to eternity, the blackness of darkness for ever; and lastly, hell itself. And such a wretched place as this must needs increase our wretchedness. The cruelty of our tormentors is another thing that adds to our torments. Our tormentors are devils in whom there is no pity; but being tormented themselves, do yet take pleasure in tormenting us. All those particulars that I have reckoned up are very grievous; but that which makes them much more grievous is that they shall ever be so; and all our most intolerable sufferings shall last to all eternity. 'Depart from Me ye cursed into everlasting fires' is that which is perpetually sounding in my ears. Oh, that I could reverse that fatal sentence! Oh, that there was but a bare possibility of doing it! Thus have I showed you the miserable situation we are in, and shall be in forever."

In the prophet Jeremiah God said to the hell bound nation of Moab "I will weep for thee." Can we share God's tears for those that are walking in the vanity of their minds and apart from God. Weep Christian!

Re: A VISION OF HELL by Greg Gordon - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2006/12/3 12:32

Here are some responses to the article, it is interesting that the clear teaching of hell brings about in the carnal nature a resounding NO it cannot be, even as Christians. But oh it is true and we best not to ignore this reality:

Quote:
-----Just wondering ??????
How come a God who commands us to forgive our enemies subjects his to eternal torment ?
If say only 5% of human-kind get saved , will Christ's mission to save the world be considered a success or failure ?
How come Jesus states in John 6:44 and John 15:16 , that only those chosen can come to the father, yet those that he hasn't chosen are burned alive eternally, purely on the basis that he never chose them in the first case ?
What about those who have never heard ?
How are we going to enjoy ourselves in heaven , knowing our sons, daughters , mothers , fathers , grand children and friends are roasting in a furnace whilst conscious.?
Is God going to wipe our memories and emotions, so that we no longer worry about them?
Saddam Hussein's son used to put people (whilst alive)through tree shredders, we consider his behaviour barbaric. yet the God of love appears to be far worse. a tree shredder is relatively quick after all.
How come the word eternal does not appear in the original greek ?
How old do you have to be when you qualify for eternal damnation ? should I kill my children before they reach that age, in order to guarantee their eternal salvation.? I know murderers don't get into heaven , but at least I know my children will be safe.

Quote:
-----More musings
Why should we oppose abortion ? I guess an aborted baby will go to heaven , whilst a fully mature adult not having much chance of being drawn by the Father will more than likely end up in hell. Aren't the abortionist doing them a favour ?

Quote:
The cruelty of our tormentors is another thing that adds to our torments. Our tormentors are devils in whom there is no pity; but being tormented themselves, do yet take pleasure in tormenting us can I have scripture reference for the above quote ?

as it sounds a bit pagan too me

Quote:
-----Srtumcrazy - Please know - God is not a failure - has never been a failure - and will never be a failure - and His promises are Yea and Amen - He and His Son and the Holy Spirit have made a way for the salvation of souls - The word says that Christ left heaven - came to earth - and - came to save that which is lost - that is you and me - and - All who will repent of their sins - turn from their sins - and - turn towards God - and - call on the name of the Lord.

I am not sure where you get the figure 5% only will make it into heaven - now - that is not what I see in the Revelation of Jesus Christ and what John the revelator saw.

Revelation7: - 9-After these things I looked and - Behold! - a "Great Multitude" - Which "no one" could number - of all - nations - tribes - and peoples - and - tongues - standing before the throne - and - before the Lamb - clothed with white robes - with Palm branches in their hands - and - crying out with h a Mighty shout - Salvation belongs to our God who sits on the Throne - and - to the Lamb.

Revelation 19: 1- After these things - I heard a loud voice of a "Great Multitude" Shouting - Alleluia! - Salvation and glory and honor and power to the Lord our God.

Here we see a Vast crowd - to great to count - and - the sound of a "vast" crowd - in heaven.

Now John was seeing into, and speaking of the the future here - and he is saying there are so many that we would not be able to count them all - now we can count up into the Trillions and yet there are so many we can not count them all.

There will be the Old testament and New testament saints from all time since creation and until the last days.

There is more people on planet earth right now than anytime in history and there is still a great harvest of souls to reach for Christ.

Revelations 19: 13-14 - He (Jesus) was clothed with a robe dipped in blood - and - His title was - "The Word of God" - The armies of heaven - dressed in pure white linen (saints) followed Him on white horses.

Heaven will be full of the saints of God.

Our job here and now as disciples of Christ is to reach as many souls as we can with the gosple of Christ. We should be eager to take as many as we can with us for Christ - for the harvest is ripe.

God Bless, Lynn

Re: A VISION OF HELL by Greg Gordon - posted by MaryJane, on: 2006/12/3 12:43

Greetings Greg

after reading this I was reminded how vitally important it is for us not to hide or selfishly keep what God has given us. What better gift or demonstration of love could we show another human being then to take the time and share Jesus with them. Sadly the number of people that do not believe that God would ever send them to hell is the norm today. I have heard more then once that God is so loving and merciful to ever send anyone to hell. I always respond with, "if we can trust God when He promises us heaven for a life of obedience and submission to Jesus; then we surely can trust and believe Him when He also states that those who reject His son will suffer the torments of hell for eternity!

IT is good also to remember the love and sacrifice that Jesus demonstrated for us, He is deserving of a heart that is willing to take up their cross daily and follow after Him! Its not just about keeping people out of Hell its about sharing with them because Jesus is deserving of His reward, He suffered, was tormented, and died, to pay the penalty for our iniquity, let Him not be cheated!

God Bless your sister in Christ
MJ

Re: - posted by ChrisJD (), on: 2006/12/3 13:23

I think we are all hindered in the estimation of our offences in lacking a vision of the worth and magnitude of the Being of God. We are quick to forget our wrongs. Our sense of the harm we've done may also fade as time goes by. This, and we lack, in our natural sense, the ability to exactly perceive the insults felt by others, but especially in this case, those that would be felt by Deity.

A story stands out in my mind that I heard in a testimony given by Duncan Campbell of a farmer who was brought under such conviction that he cried over and again that hell was too good for him. I may be wrong in the details and someone might have a better recollection of it than me.

My own experience in conversion was of great and strong conviction of sin to the point of loud crying and profuse tears.

I pray God have mercy on us all.

Re: - posted by pshdsa, on: 2007/12/16 14:27

We reason that if we were God we could not in good conscience send someone to Hell more than temporarily, if at all. Yet we would allow heinous criminals to suffer a little bit more, but never forever. We reason thusly because we do not understand the magnitude of sin in our natures and in our lives. We justify ourselves by default. We are truly blind when we reason a loving God would not send anyone to Hell for eternity. Because we minimize sin; we minimize the consequence, and accuse God of being cruel. But we can get a glimpse of the magnitude of sin even being blind. How can it be that God the Son became a man to die for me, for us. That sacrifice has to be very, very great to wipe out our sins. If I can spend all eternity in Hell and still not pay for my sins, how very, very great is the sacrifice of Jesus Christ that not only pays for all my sins, but for all the sins of the entire world. This is a sacrifice well, well beyond our ken. If this sacrifice is way, way, way beyond our knowing, then how horrific must the consequence be to those who refuse this great, great, great sacrifice. And if we Christians, through the trials of life, have become hardened and unbelieving, and losing our first love, must we not see our poverty before our Lord? How we have presumed on his grace. How worldly we have become. The Lord will have a pure church. May God give us the grace to persevere through the fire that will make us white. Don't you feel your poverty? I feel mine. Lord revive us that we might be revived.

Quote:

sermonindex wrote:
Here are some responses to the article, it is interesting that the clear teaching of hell brings about in the carnal nature a resounding NO it cannot be, even as Christians. But oh it is true and we be best not to ignore this reality:

Quote:
-----Just wondering ??????
How come a God who commands us to forgive our enemies subjects his to eternal torment ?
If say only 5% of human-kind get saved , will Christ's mission to save the world be considered a success or failure ?
How come Jesus states in John 6:44 and John 15:16 , that only those chosen can come to the father, yet those that he hasn't chosen are burned alive eternally, purely on the basis that he never chose them in the first case ?
What about those who have never heard ?
How are we going to enjoy ourselves in heaven , knowing our sons, daughters , mothers , fathers , grand children and friends are roasting in a furnace whilst conscious.?
Is God going to wipe our memories and emotions, so that we no longer worry about them?
Saddam Hussein's son used to put people (whilst alive)through tree shredders, we consider his behaviour barbaric. yet the God of love appears to be far worse. a tree shredder is relatively quick after all.
How come the word eternal does not appear in the original greek ?
How old do you have to be when you qualify for eternal damnation ? should I kill my children before they reach that age, in order to guarantee their eternal salvation.? I know murderers don't get into heaven , but at least I know my children will be safe.

Quote:
-----More musings
Why should we oppose abortion ? I guess an aborted baby will go to heaven , whilst a fully mature adult not having much chance of being drawn by the Father will more than likely end up in hell. Aren't the abortionist doing them a favour ?

Quote:
The cruelty of our tormentors is another thing that adds to our torments. Our tormentors are devils in whom there is no pity; but being tormented themselves, do yet take pleasure in tormenting us can I have scripture reference for the above quote ?

as it sounds a bit pagan too me

Quote:
-----Srtumcrazy - Please know - God is not a failure - has never been a failure - and will never be a failure - and His promises are Yea and Amen - He and His Son and the Holy Spirit have made a way for the salvation of souls - The word says that Christ left heaven - came to earth - and - came to save that which is lost - that is you and me - and - All who will repent of their sins - turn from their sins - and - turn towards God - and - call on the name of the Lord.

I am not sure where you get the figure 5% only will make it into heaven - now - that is not what I see in the Revelation of Jesus Christ and what John the revelator saw.

Revelation 7: - 9-After these things I looked and - Behold! - a "Great Multitude" - Which "no one" could number - of all - nations - tribes - and peoples - and - tongues - standing before the throne - and - before the Lamb - clothed with white robes - with Palm branches in their hands - and - crying out with a Mighty shout - Salvation belongs to our God who sits on the Throne - and - to the Lamb.

Revelation 19: 1- After these things - I heard a loud voice of a "Great Multitude" Shouting - Alleluia! - Salvation and glory and honor and power to the Lord our God.

Here we see a Vast crowd - to great to count - and - the sound of a "vast" crowd - in heaven.

Now John was seeing into, and speaking of the the future here - and he is saying there are so many that we would not be able to count them all - now we can count up into the Trillions and yet there are so many we can not count them all.

There will be the Old testament and New testament saints from all time since creation and until the last days.

There is more people on planet earth right now than anytime in history and there is still a great harvest of souls to reach for Christ.

Revelations 19: 13-14 - He (Jesus) was clothed with a robe dipped in blood - and - His title was - "The Word of God" - The armies of heaven - dressed in pure white linen (saints) followed Him on white horses.

Heaven will be full of the saints of God.

Our job here and now as disciples of Christ is to reach as many souls as we can with the gosple of Christ. We should be eager to take as many as we can with us for Christ - for the harvest is ripe.

God Bless, Lynn

Re: - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2007/12/16 14:33

Quote:

-----Don't you feel your poverty? I feel mine. Lord revive us that we might be revived.

Amen dear brother.