

Scriptures and Doctrine :: Jonathan Edwards Online Archive

Jonathan Edwards Online Archive - posted by philologos (), on: 2007/1/17 4:59

I'm not sure where we put our recommendations now, but this is most certainly 'doctrine'. This site requires a registration which is free but has the whole of Edwards works and a useful search facility. Well worth a look... and another...

(<http://edwards.yale.edu/archive/>) The Works of Jonathan Edwards Online.

Re: Jonathan Edwards Online Archive - posted by crsschk (), on: 2007/1/17 8:40

Thank you Ron.

Thought I would head this off at the pass here, a note from their site;

All documents are Â© 2006 Jonathan Edwards Center, Yale University. These transcripts are the result of countless hours of labor and are not in the public domain. Any unauthorized reproduction will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. If you have inquiries about this, please email edwards@yale.edu.

Respect their wishes.

Re: - posted by Compton (), on: 2007/1/17 10:19

I think they've been at work transcribing their vast handwritten collection, which includes not only sermons, but scientific and philosophic writings, as well as some letters, for about 50 years!

Yale University press is publishing an anthology of his sermons. The first volume (http://www.amazon.com/Sermons-Jonathan-Edwards-Reader/dp/0300077688/sr1-1/qid1169044933/refpd_bbs_sr_1/002-5415958-1454438?ieUTF8&sbooks) The Sermons of Jonathan Edwards contains 5 previously unpublished sermons.

Among these is a very interesting address to native Americans called To the Mohawks at the Treaty, which was a panoramic Gospel rendering of the creation, fall and redemption of man, with chronological and theological order (eventually leading up to a confession of the 'white man's' neglect of Christian duty to the Indian.) The sermon ends with a strong invitation to be "made fit for heaven." Delivered at a settlement in Stockbridge Massachusetts in 1751, Edwards appeared to distance his message from that of British representatives who must have been standing nearby. He began:

These honorable gentlemen treat in the name of King George but I in the name of Jesus Christ...

MC