Gary Wilkerson - Bio

Gary Wilkerson comes from a long line of devoted ministers of the Gospel. A great great grandfather who served as a Chaplain during the civil war, a great grandfather who was a tent revival preacher, a grandfather who was a denominational leader and a father who is an internationally recognized author, evangelist and pastor.

Gary carries on this calling not out of obligation or sense of family heritage, but a clear calling from God he received when he was only 6 years old. He began preaching at 16, youth pastor at 19, planting a church at 23. Since that time he has helped plant churches, served on staff at Times Square Church, started an orphanage, an inner city school, and a coffee house for young people in San Francisco.

This past year Gary has begun to travel with his father, David Wilkerson, conducting ministers' conferences around the world. He also leads Passion for Jesus Conferences in North America that encourages a single-hearted return to Jesus. He has also just released his first book - The Divine Intercessor.

The primary calling on Gary's life is to speak, teach and write about the awakening and renewing a passionate hunger for Jesus. His desire is that many come to know the height, depth and vastness of the love of Jesus.
