American culture has fought long and hard to become independent of God. In spite of the many road blocks that God has strategically placed in her path our country is racing down a broad way that leads to ultimate destruction. Is it a wonder or is it a surprise that the light of so many can be snuffed out by one so cold. In a country that has rejected the true God the sad answer is no. The church (which I believe very strongly in) bears some of the weight of responsibility. Our pulpits are filled with puppets, prayer is on the endangered list and a true move of God has become a historical event that happened once upon a time. My God send forth a voice in this land that will cry out in harmony, a voice in the vast wilderness of America that will make ready the way for a mighty move of God.
