

General Topics :: Churches in Atlanta?

Churches in Atlanta? - posted by BeYeDoers (), on: 2007/5/15 22:22

Anybody know of any good solid churches in the ATL? I know I don't have to say it on this site, but obviously looking for glory of God Bible preaching. Not particular to denomination or Calvin/Arminian leanings. Just no hint of emerging or Word-Faith. Thanks.

Re: Churches in Atlanta? - posted by Spitfire, on: 2007/5/16 6:26

I know a great church in Atlanta. It's called Church of the Apostles and the pastor is Michael Youseff. He's Egyptian, and man does he ever preach the word. I've never been there, but I've seen him on TV, heard him on radio, and read one of his books. This guy's for real. I have some friends who attend this church. It's on Northside Parkway. Here's their website link <http://www.apostles.org/>

Re: - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2007/5/16 9:38

I used to listen to Michael Youseff but he is very Calvinistic, if this means anything to you. Whether this is still the case, I do not know because I no longer listen to Him. But he does have a lot of good things to say.

You could try asking God for Holy Spirit direction and see where he would lead you...and I am sure you have done this...

Just my opinion....

ginnyrose

Re: - posted by letsgetbusy (), on: 2007/5/16 21:22

Charles Stanley is pretty good at First Baptist of Atlanta: <http://www.fba.org/>

Michael Youssef is also pretty good, at Church of the Apostles, as mentioned.

I have friends that go to Mt Paran Church of God, which is supposed to be pretty solid:
<http://www.mountparan.com/>

I have some friends that attend many different churches downtown, but I will be honest, I haven't heard of any church that at where there is a pillar of flame at the moment. If revival was going on somewhere in Atlanta I would go there and invite you.

Re: - posted by BeYeDoers (), on: 2007/5/16 23:29

Anybody know anything else about Mt Paran Church of God? I looked at their website and it looks like they might lean a little too much on life enhancement gospel and the I/me we/us. I really have no idea, which is why I ask.

BTW my inquiries are for the sake of a good friend who will be living in ATL for the next 3 months. thanks again.

Re: - posted by letsgetbusy (), on: 2007/5/18 13:19

BYD,

I have asked someone I respect a great deal who goes there to answer your question. I think he will shoot pretty straight. I will let you know what he says.

Re: Churches in Atlanta? - posted by HopePurifies (), on: 2007/5/18 14:25

Oooh I am glad for this post! I will be living very near Atlanta soon too.

Re: - posted by Nile (), on: 2007/5/18 15:39

Quote:

HopePurifies wrote:

Oooh I am glad for this post! I will be living very near Atlanta soon too.

...as will I! We should get together some time ;-) (check my profile, hehe)

Re: - posted by BeYeDoers (), on: 2007/5/21 11:00

How about Spanish-speaking churches?

Re: Churches in Atlanta? - posted by repentcanada, on: 2007/5/21 12:09 stay away from Creflo Dollar's World Changers church in the ATL

Re:, on: 2007/5/24 17:45

I have a friend that goes to this church in Smyrna, GA near Atlanta.

Calvary Baptist Church of Smyrna, GA
<http://www.cbcofsmyrna.com/>

This is a good, solid church with sound, Biblical, Christ-centered preaching. The pastor's name is T.P. Johnston. (I think Keith Daniel has preached at this church at least once.)

Hope you all find a church!

~Joy