Articles and Sermons :: The Old Cross and the New by AW Tozer

The Old Cross and the New by AW Tozer - posted by InTheLight (), on: 2007/5/31 10:53

This is a strong article from Tozer that is much along the lines of Reidhead's great sermon Ten Shekels and a Shirt. I kn ow I need to be reminded of these things often because, if we aren't diligent, it is easy to slip into the realm of humanism when sharing the gospel...

The Old Cross and the New

All unannounced and mostly undetected, there has come in modern times a new cross into popular evangelical circles. It is like the old cross, but different. The likenesses are superficial; the differences, fundamental.

From this new cross has sprung a new philosophy of the Christian life, and from that new philosophy has come a new ev angelical technique– a new type of meeting and a new kind of preaching. This new evangelism employs the same language as the old, but its content is not the same and its emphasis not as before.

The old cross would have no truck with the world. For Adam's proud flesh it meant the end of the journey. The n ew cross is not opposed to the human race. Rather, it is a friendly pal and, if understood aright, it is the source of ocean s of good, clean fun and innocent enjoyment. It lets Adam live without interference. His life motivation is unchanged. He still lives for his own pleasure, only now he takes delight in singing choruses and watching religious movies instead of si nging bawdy songs and drinking hard liquor. The accent is still on enjoyment, though the fun is now on a higher plane m orally if not intellectually.

The new cross encourages a new and entirely different evangelistic approach. The evangelist does not demand abnegat ion of the old life before a new life can be received. He preaches not contrasts but similarities. He seeks to key into publi c interest by showing that Christianity makes no unpleasant demands. Rather, it offers the same thing the world does, o nly on a higher level. Whatever the sin-mad world happens to be clamoring after at the moment is cleverly shown to be t he very thing the gospel offers, only the religious product is better.

The new cross does not slay the sinner, it redirects him. It gears him into a cleaner and jollier way of living and saves his self-respect. To the self-assertive it says, "Come and assert yourself for Christ." To the egotist it says, "Come and do your boasting in the Lord." To the thrill-seeker it says, "Come and enjoy the thrill of C hristian fellowship." The Christian message is slanted in the direction of the current vogue in order to make it acc eptable to the public.

The philosophy back of this kind of thing may seem sincere, but its sincerity does not save it from being false. It is false because it is blind. It misses completely the whole meaning of the cross.

The old cross is a symbol of death. It stands for the abrupt, violent end of a human being. The man in Roman times who took up his cross and started down the road had already said good-by to his friends. He was not coming back. He was going out to have it ended. The cross made no compromise, modified nothing, spared nothing. It slew all of the man, com pletely and for good. It did not try to keep on good terms with its victim. It struck cruel and hard, and when it had finished its work, the man was no more.

The race of Adam is under a death sentence. There is no commutation and no escape. God cannot approve any of the f ruits of sin, however innocent they may appear to the eyes of men. God salvages the individual by liquidating him and th en raising him again to newness of life.

That evangelism which draws friendly parallels between the ways of God and the ways of men is false to the Bible and c ruel to the souls of its hearers. The faith of Christ does not parallel the world, it intersects it. In coming to Christ we do no t bring our old life up onto a higher plane–we leave it at the cross. The corn of wheat must fall into the ground and die.

We who preach the gospel must not think of ourselves as public relations agents sent to establish good will between Chr ist and the world. We must not imagine ourselves commissioned to make Christ acceptable to big business, the press, t he world of sports, or modern education. We are not diplomats but prophets, and our message is not a compromise but an ultimatum.

Articles and Sermons :: The Old Cross and the New by AW Tozer

God offers life, but not an improved old life. The life He offers is life out of death. It stands always on the far side of the cr oss. Whoever would possess it must pass under the rod. He must repudiate himself and concur in God's just se ntence against him. What does this mean to the individual, the condemned man who would find life in Christ Jesus? Ho w can this theology be translated into life? Simply, he must repent and believe. He must forsake his sins and then go on to forsake himself. Let him cover nothing, defend nothing, excuse nothing. Let him not seek to make terms with God, but let him bow his head before the stroke of God's stern displeasure and acknowledge himself worthy to die.

Having done this, let him gaze with simple trust upon the risen Saviour, and from Him will come life and rebirth and clea nsing and power. The cross that ended the earthly life of Jesus now puts an end to the sinner, and the power that raised Christ from the dead now raises him to a new life along with Christ.

To any who may object to this or count it merely a narrow and private view of truth, let me say God has set His hallmark of approval upon this message from Paul's day to the present. Whether stated in these exact words or not, this h as been the content of all preaching that has brought life and power to the world through the centuries. The reformers, the revivalists have put their emphasis here, and signs and wonders and mighty operations of the Holy Ghost gave witnes s to God's approval.

Dare we, the heirs of such a legacy of power, tamper with the truth? Dare we with our stubby pencils erase the lines of the blueprint or alter the pattern shown us? God forbid. Let us preach the old cross and we will know the old power.

Re: The Old Cross and the New by AW Tozer - posted by hmmhmm (), on: 2007/5/31 11:25

i put this article up, a translated version in my church. but someone took it down:-(, thanks for sharing, the cross is foolishness to them that perish...

Re: - posted by InTheLight (), on: 2007/5/31 12:15

Quote:
i put this article up, a translated version in my church . but someone took it down

I'm sorry to hear that, hopefully someone read it who needed to hear that message before it was taken down.

That reminds me of when I wanted to give away free copies of the Revival Hymn at our church's bookstore. I gave a cop y to an assistant pastor for his review and he told me that it was too "dark", that it would scare people. I wanted to ask hi m, "but is it the truth?", but I just left it alone. Perhaps I should have spoken up.

In Christ.

Ron

Re: - posted by hmmhmm (), on: 2007/5/31 13:04

yeah.... most churches wouldn't want to rock the boat. Id like to play the revival hymn on all of those big screens that mo st churches have these days.