

News and Current Events :: Britain has become a 'Catholic country'

Britain has become a 'Catholic country' - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2007/12/23 15:59

Britain has become a 'Catholic country'

Roman Catholics have overtaken Anglicans as the country's dominant religious group. More people attend Mass every Sunday than worship with the Church of England, figures seen by The Sunday Telegraph show.

This means that the established Church has lost its place as the nation's most popular Christian denomination after more than four centuries of unrivalled influence following the Reformation. Last night, leading figures gave warning that the Church of England could become a minority faith and that the findings should act as a wake-up call. ...

read more: <http://www.telegraph.co.uk>

Re: Britain has become a 'Catholic country', on: 2007/12/23 16:36

Quote:

-----Britain has become a 'Catholic country'

:-O

America next?

Re: Britain has become a 'Catholic country' - posted by murrcolr (), on: 2007/12/23 18:08

Britain has become a 'Catholic country'

The rise of Catholicism has been bolstered by an influx of immigrants from eastern Europe.

The Anglican church is born out of a King's lust. Do we need a church with a pope as the head no. A church with the Queen as the head no.

No we need Jesus to build his church.....

Oh is it going to be great when God arises in our land again.

"Great God, give me the UK, or I die." :-x :-x

Re:, on: 2007/12/24 13:48

And the Archbishop is a druid.

http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/uk_news/wales/2172918.stm

I wonder when we'll realize that we're living in "those days". :-(

Re:, on: 2008/1/2 12:53

Quote:

murrcofr wrote:

Britain has become a 'Catholic country'

The rise of Catholicism has been bolstered by an influx of immigrants from eastern Europe.

The Anglican church is born out of a King's lust. Do we need a church with a pope as the head no. A church with the Queen as the head no.

No we need Jesus to build his church.....

Oh is it going to be great when God arises in our land again.

"Great God, give me the UK, or I die." :-x :-x

There is still a remnant there in the UK. The Noahs there are saying it gonna rain, translated now days, get in the ark (Jesus) it gonna be fire this time.

Re: Britain has become a 'Catholic country' - posted by iansmith (), on: 2008/1/2 14:11

I was just considering that Christ's never counted on numbers to win the battle. He picked 12 peasants. Gideon was told to take 300 men against a force numbering in the thousands. Whatever the size of our church Jesus is already victorious.

Re:, on: 2008/1/2 16:05

Quote:

-----America next?

Well, we went back to lent, purely a Catholic Traditional something, sometime after WWII (edited). Now I hear about Protestant confession :-o I'm not surprised, and I'm sure we are more than next.

We now have Christian and Mormons Together so we're going to be seeing more than just going back to Rome for a Holy day.

The issues here in America are MORALS, not Calvary...so once everyone is whipped into shape, who will need personal salvation? :-?

Love in Christ
Katy-Did

PS: Added,

And as bus loads of thousands upon thousands of Protestants were taken to see Mel Gibson's Passion (of which many Catholic Priests objected to) to see the "STATIONS OF THE CROSS", and the extra Biblical Marian Emphasis, without objection....yep, we're not next...we simply are.

Re:, on: 2008/1/2 18:17

http://www.christianpost.com/article/20070130/25500_Bono%5C's_Songs_Replacing_Hymnals_in_Churches.htm

I thought this was an interesting article.

Katy-Did