CHRISTIANS 'SLEEPING'
WHILE HINDUS PLAN TO MAKE COMEBACK IN INDIA

In India, Hindu nationalists are vowing to reclaim power as the opposition Bharatiya Janata Party meets this week to strategize how to do that.

While believers are encouraged by the recent change of power with the country's first-ever non-Hindu government in place, Gospel for Asia President K.P. Yohannan says he's puzzled by the response of believers.

"God in His mercy has given us five years right now with a new government. That government says, 'We will protect the minorities, and we will give them freedom to spread their faith.' But the church at large, I'm afraid, is missing it." Yohannan says not all groups are sleeping, but not enough is being done. "In a nation with 1.2 billion people, you can imagine how much a handful of groups can do. What we need is an incredible revival and a passion for souls among the body of Christ at large." Despite the new government, persecution continues in many parts of India.
