-----Mike Judge, a spokesman for the Christian Institute, a pressure group which is funding her case, said: 'I cannot imagine that an atheist foster carer would be struck off if a Christian child in her care stopped believing in God. This is the sort of double standard which Christians are facing in modern Britain. In recent months, we have seen grandparents, a nurse, adoption agencies, firemen, registrars, elderly care homes and now a foster carer being punished because of the Christian beliefs they hold. It has got to stop.'

With all the tales coming out of there, it certainly seems to be escalating.

Praying for the Saints who are under these pressures, that they will lean on Jesus for the strength they will need.
