This is interesting, to say the least.

Austrian investigative journalist Jane Burgermeister charges WHO with bioterrorism and attempts to commit genocide (to depopulate the US).

From
(<http://articles.mercola.com/sites/articles/archive/2009/07/23/Journalist-Accuses-WHO-of-Plan-to-Commit-Mass-Murder.aspx>) Mercola article on it - the 3rd video down is really a telephone interview with jane burgermeister.

The Burgermeister case against the World Health Organization (WHO) and other government agencies and high ranking officials is starting to spread across the Internet. But despite the fact that it could easily be one of the hottest news headlines this year, not a word can be found about it in the mainstream media. This has led many to dismiss it as either a hoax, or an attempt to raise the stakes by a demented conspiracy theorist.

However, based on Jane Burgermeister's own blog, interviews, and the documentation found on the site WakeNews, with links to the criminal charges and bioterrorism evidence filed with the FBI in Austria on June 10, 2009, the suit appears quite real, and Burgermeister quite serious about her allegations.

And as for the conventional media blackout, well... that shouldn't come as a major surprise, all things considered, and can't be used as proof to dismiss the validity of the story. After all, I've written enough articles discussing how the media is in large part bought and paid for by the pharmaceutical industry.

Not sure what to think about this story. Does raise some questions though. Thanks for sharing
