counting the cost - posted by truthseer (), on: 2009/10/29 3:15

So far my relationship with Christ has cost me everything. It cost me my relationship with my parents. They are not Christians, and disowned me for a couple of years. It cost me my relationship with my wife, she divorced me and ran off with someone else. It cost me my children, she got them in the divorce case. It has cost me friends and family to follow Christ with all of my heart. How did I deal with it . #1 I learned how to forgive and forget. #2 I learned to choose Christ first. #3 I learned that His grace is sufficient for me, no matter how much I suffered, He poured in the oil and wine, and gave me resurrection life to overcome the hardship. His love is all you truly need. I have learned how to trust Him with every area of my life. He will never leave you or forsake you. He truly is my good shepherd. A lot of times I did not know how it was going to work out. Then the LORD JESUS showed me back over the course of my life His sovereignty and guidance. Learn to lean on HIM with all your heart, HE will never fail you. I would like to say that it has cost me everything to follow Him. All this has brought me closer to my LORD. Any cross that Jesus asks you to bear, He will give you the grace to carry it. Praise the Lord!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Jesus tells us in Mark 10:29-31 that those who have left all for the sake of the gospel will receive, in this life, a hundredfold, all that he gave up.

But it also comes with persecutions, and in the age to come, eternal life.

So, we certainly, as Christians, do not live on easy street.

But, God is worth all the glory, honour, worship and more, than we could ever give Him.

God bless.

Your witness is encouraging to us all. I think of Christian in Pilgrims Progress as his wife and children refuse to follow him.

We say with our mouth Jesus will never leave us etc. We also say trial and tribulations draw us closer. But it's when we actually experience all this and still come closer not farther to the Lord that the truth of it gives all of us hope!
