Mullah Wants Nukes

Yahoo! News is reporting an Associated Press story detailing a book written by Ayatollah Yazdi calling for Iran to produce nuclear weapons.

"The Associated Press on Monday obtained a copy of a book written by Ayatollah Mohammad Taqi Mesbah Yazdi in which he wrote Iran should not deprive itself of the right to produce these "special weapons." ... Yazdi's hardline views, including devotion to the Mahdi, a messiah-like figure to reappear ahead of judgement day, have had a strong impact on Ahmadinejad, who shows him more respect than any other senior cleric. ... In his book, Yazdi said Iran must acquire the necessary deterrent weapons in order to be able to stand up to its enemies. "Under Islamic teachings, all common tools and materialistic instruments must be employed against the enemy and prevent enemy's military superiority," he said. He also said Muslims must not allow a few powers to monopolize certain weapons in their arsenal."

Analysis. Lest you wonder further what the source of all the problems really is, I give you Ayatollah Yazdi. Shi'i theology says that the Mahdi will only reappear in a time of chaos to lead the faithful (Shiites) to world domination. What could be more chaotic than a regional war in the Middle East?
