You will notice in one of the related YouTube videos, a photo of this site was featured in Life Magazine decades ago as a possible site of Noah's Ark. Apparently it is not a new possibility, just receiving new attention and more excavation and examination.

I was not aware that the Koran discussed Noah's Ark, since I have never read it, but the claim is that the Koran, which names the specific mountain, has it correct if this is in fact the ark. The Bible is not necessarily wrong, since it says "the mountains of Ararat", meaning any mountain in that range.
