

Miracles that follow the plow :: Please pray for my wife*Please pray for my wife - posted by beatenpath, on: 2011/1/6 20:36

Her neck is giving her problems at the moment. She got into an altercation back in 08 with her patient (wife is a nurse) too where her patient assaulted her. Nothing too serious just a headache and a sore neck. Well my wife just got back from seeing her doctor and her doctor related that incident to her sore neck. Problem is that doctors see this happen all the time with whiplash/neck injury patients. My wife was prescribed medication and a neck brace to help with the pain. Her pain popped up this morning after she slept in an awkward position last night.

Please pray that her neck muscles strengthen over time and 'morning stiff necks' won't limit her abilities at work and at home in the future. Thanks. Her name is Maria.

Re: Please pray for my wife - posted by Nellie, on: 2011/1/6 21:08

Father, please touch Mari's pain.
In Jesus Name.

Re: Please pray for my wife - posted by amranger (), on: 2011/1/7 0:02

I'll be praying also, I understand neck pain having gone through it this past year.

Andrew

Re: , on: 2011/1/7 7:45

I hear ya about the neck pain. My Mother told me to take Gravel an anti nausea. I thought, how does anti nausea look after neck pain, she said it relaxes the muscles. It worked! I cut the thing in half as I don't need the full strength, just enough so I can get to sleep and that usually carries me for a few days. I can feel that pain in my neck now, but it's tolerable and I won't take the over the counter medication until it's unbearable. I hope this helps your wife. But I will still pray for her and have prayed for her.

Re: - posted by Joyful_Heart, on: 2011/1/7 14:46

I prayed and will continue. Be glorified here Lord. In Jesus Name. Amen.

Re: Please pray for my wife - posted by beatenpath (), on: 2011/1/7 17:32

Thanks guys! Her neck is feeling better with her medications but they make her sleepy. I'll try that Gravel med. Is that over-the-counter or prescription?