The problem with posting so many threads is that they probably won't get read. Especially if they are long, which yours are.

I can't be bothered to read them. Too many and too long.

Besides, you have not introduced yourself.

Who are you? Are you a Christian or what? Will these questions be answered or ignored?

I think maybe they will be ignored.

Bye.

Shanu, Are you aware that the author of the articles you quoted from and the web site in your post promotes non-biblical teachings and practices? I went to the web site and David Pratte in his teaching espouses another gospel which is no go spel at all.

His view is that water baptism is absolutely essential for salvation.

What do you believe happens to a person who dies without water baptism?

Nice of you to condense the post and to change the title to something completely different.

Humanism, unbelief, materialism, situation ethics and moral permissiveness was the title initially.

Now its nine gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Just wonder what the next title will be.

Bye.

There are more than nine gifts of the Holy Spirit.

Enid,

I didn't know that you could change the title of a post you created... can we really do that? I wanted to change one once that I created (thought it was too long) and couldn't figure out how to do it.

God bless,
Lisa

Shanu- Are you a seeker of God as He reveals Himself through the scriptures?

Hi Lisa,

Quote:
-----can we really do that

Just go back to the opening post, and the title is available to be edited as well as the post itself.

Shanu, The bible teaches that God can be known. He is the answer to your seeking heart. Here is a presentation to help you find your hearts true home.
