

News and Current Events :: Florida judge using Islamic law to decide case

Florida judge using Islamic law to decide case - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2011/3/23 15:49

The question of what law applies in any Florida courtroom usually comes down to two choices: federal or state.

But Hillsborough Circuit Judge Richard Nielsen is being attacked by conservative bloggers after he ruled in a lawsuit March 3 that, to resolve one crucial issue in the case, he will consult a different source.

"This case," the judge wrote, "will proceed under Ecclesiastical Islamic Law.

read more: <http://www.tampabay.com/news/courts/civil/article1158818.ece>

Re: Florida judge using Islamic law to decide case, on: 2011/3/28 0:07

Are you serious? I am almost afraid to ask what next?

Re: Florida judge using Islamic law to decide case, on: 2011/3/28 0:25

just hyperventilating, in all due respect.

why dont we give ourselves over to pray that the glowing pile in Japan doesnt give itself over to a full fledged meltdown.

that pile of glowing nuclear fuel rods, plutonium included, blows, and the world wont be worried about sharia law.

panic is so contagious, it spreads like a wildfire, simply because the danger is unseen, and the info is controlled by weak and cowardly men, whose default setting is not TRUTH.

first pray, trust in God, use wisdom, stock up on 3 months drinking water, as well as continuing to beef out your larder, and watch Japan....not Florida...due respect and humility i say this.