Frequently it is we Christians who fall into the sin of living our lives independently of God. Basically, we do as we please. And often, like hypocrites, we try to cover up our sin of living our lives apart from the Father. We excuse ourselves.

Instead, we should examine ourselves to see how far we are actually living in childlike dependence upon the Father in the nitty-gritty of everyday life. Let us ask the Holy Spirit for light in this matter. Our lives will be fruitless if, in our self-will, we plan them independently of God. The more we depend upon God, even in the smallest things of life, the more fruit we will reap one day above, for we will have learnt to do everything in God.
