President George W Bush yesterday predicted that he would bring peace between Israel and the Palestinians during his second term in office, making a strikingly bold assessment of his foreign-policy goals for the next four years.

"I want you to know that I am going to invest a lot of time and a lot of creative thinking so that there will finally be peace between Israel and the Palestinians," Mr Bush told the Israeli newspaper Yedioth Aharonoth.

"I am convinced that, during this term, I will manage to bring peace."

Mr Bush entered the White House determined not to follow the path of his predecessor, Bill Clinton, who devoted much of his presidency to an ultimately fruitless search for an end to the conflict.

But as he prepares for the start of his second term next month, Mr Bush sees the elusive quest as a principal ambition of his presidency.

I can see that, after all he said that he was a "war president".

As we have seen in previous attempts with dealing with the middle east, peace talks are cheap, you need an aggressive force to bring stability in an unstable region.

Even though we know this from a worldly point of view, yet the same thing holds true in the Spirit.

Its the violent that take the kingdom of God by force.

In fairness to Mr Bush, this was not peace to the Middle East but 'peace' between the Israelis and the Palestinians. Even so it is an extraordinary statement, and is going to take much more than an investment in 'a lot of time and creative thinking'.
