

News and Current Events :: Steve Jobs just checked out

Steve Jobs just checked out, on: 2011/10/5 20:04

I wonder if this man accepted the blood sacrifice of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ before he died? I really really hope he did. I wonder if somebody as rich as he was can get into heaven. There must be a way in the grace of God for him.

I've never owned an apple product in my life. No Apple computer, no iphone (no cell at all) no ipad, no ipod. I'll bet some of you all have though.

God bless you and enjoy this wonderful evening.

Endzone

Re: Steve Jobs just checked out - posted by Enochh (), on: 2011/10/5 20:27

Apples first primitive computer, priced at $666.66, had no keyboard or display, and customers had to assemble it themselves. $666.66.....Hmmm...

"You can't connect the dots looking forward; you can only connect them looking backwards. So you have to trust that the dots will somehow connect in your future," Jobs told Stanford University graduates during a commencement speech in 2005. "You have to trust in something: your gut, destiny, life, karma, whatever. This approach has never let me down, and it has made all the difference in my life."wonder how he feels about that now?

Re: , on: 2011/10/5 20:32

Ennoch, I was pretty much guessing that was where he was at spiritually. It is very sad. It is really very sad. This life is so short isn't it?

Re: - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2011/10/5 23:39

What is sad is you can run and have the most success with a business (one of the largest in the world) and have 100 of millions' in the bank and without Jesus Christ you are lost and have no hope. Oh the vanity of riches and money and anything you can grasp in this earth. What only counts is faith (things unseen) in christ the son of God.

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 0:44

Quote:
-----What is sad is you can run and have the most success with a business (one of the largest in the world) and have 100 of millions' in the bank and without Jesus Christ you are lost and have no hope. Oh the vanity of riches and money and anything you can grasp in this earth. What only counts is faith (things unseen) in christ the son of God.

I have to agree with you brother. Man just think of all the homeless centers he could of put up with that cash and funding missionaries, etc. But I just don't want to see anybody go to hell. I don't care how much I dislike someone, I do NOT want them to go to hell. Maybe Steve Jobs cried out to Jesus before he died. Would you believe that he was saved if he did?

Re: Steve Jobs just checked out - posted by mguldner (), on: 2011/10/6 1:30

I was actually talking to a nonchristian coworker and what she said was pretty profound and scriptural. "Well now how is he suppose to enjoy all that money he made." Huh I wonder if Jobs ever thought of that?

Re: Funding Missions - posted by Jeremy221, on: 2011/10/6 2:00

I have used Apple products since 1985. They make well designed tools created by the hard labor of thousands of individuals around the world. Some of those very hard working people are our brethren, placed in this giant corporation to be a witness to the Light. God placed His vessels of honor in the Babylonian court too. The Lord Himself raised up Steve Jobs and Steve Wozniak. He also set the number of Job's days. Pray for boldness and a powerful anointing of the Spirit that they might share the Good News to those grieving the loss of Steve Paul Jobs.

Re: - posted by Enochh (), on: 2011/10/6 7:32

so very well put greg.....vanity. All there is here to grasp and hold is vanity

Re: - posted by PaulWest (), on: 2011/10/6 7:46

We have a saying in the funeral industry: you'll never see a hearse pulling a u-haul. Dead men have empty pockets. It's those left behind that squabble over the estate, probate the will, divide the spoil, et cetera. Like vultures over a carcass. The world is insane.

Re: - posted by Compton (), on: 2011/10/6 8:32

Even though Jobs wasn't a Christian, I don't think we should characterize him as just another rich man who didn't take his riches with him.

What I've learned from him is that when you are committed to your ideals, over the course of your life, you can achieve remarkable things. We as Christians have our professional lives too, but sadly many of us I know treat the workplace as just a regretful curse from Adams sin or as a place that owes us a paycheck. I personally think this man demonstrated how to bring your heart to work. He knew how to inspire possibilities in people...and I think even Christians can learn something from that.

Mike

Re: A Legacy - posted by Jeremy221, on: 2011/10/6 8:52

I think we should be thankful for the technologies that we all benefit from as a result of the businesses Steve Jobs started and ran. The interface on your computer, GUI, is either the direct result of or a copy of development work of Apple engineers over the past thirty years and you can find the effects thereof on your Windows and Mac computers. The world wide web had some of its early development on the NEXT platform. The first web browser, Mosaic, was developed on a Mac. It is also worthwhile to remind everyone that desktop publishing was launched because of the WYSIWYG (What You See IS What You Get) interface developed and promoted on the Macintosh platform.

I don't want you to praise the man for these things but to be thankful to the Lord for the ways that Steve Jobs influence and skill bless the saints today.

Re: - posted by MrBillPro (), on: 2011/10/6 9:17

Aside from his faith, The World lost a GREAT innovator today. Thanks Steve for all your contributions. Rest in Peace.

Re: - posted by MaryJane, on: 2011/10/6 9:32

I will be honest the title of this thread bothered me. I know that I am probably being overly sensitive but we are speaking about someones eternity. Just seems that we some times make lite of things that really are serious.

As for this mans passing, I was surprised there was not more news leading up to it. I know that there have been a couple of stories but as far as I know there were no real recent stories talking about how ill he was. Seems he wanted to keep this private or at least his last days private. I can appreciate the talents and gifts this man was given by the LORD in what he did while alive. Don't know what was on his heart in his last moments here on earth but his passing is a reminder to me at least that time is short. Our life here is over in a moment so we should be using our time here to walk every day with the LORD and look for opportunities to be about HIS Kingdom.

God Bless
maryjane

Re: Steve Jobs just checked out - posted by Lysa (), on: 2011/10/6 9:33

I've owned an iPod for a couple of years now and it's better than any mp3 player I had before that! An awesome invention to carry our sermons where ever we go!!

Yes, he was a Buddhist, but steward wise, he was an excellent steward. I wonder how many Christians can say the same thing. He was forced out of Apple in 1985. When the business was failing, they brought him back as CEO in 1997 and brought it to where it is today. And in between those years, he created what is now known as Pixar Animation Studios. I think he was an excellent steward of the talents he was given.

Now about his soul, I know nothing and neither do any of you; I don't know what happened in the last hours or days of his life. I would rather believe for mercy (since I do not know and neither does anyone else).

God bless,
Lisa

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 9:34

While true that there is much good (humanly speaking) that we can glean from Steve Jobs brief life, and there is much good that his innovations provided... one thing keeps ringing in my ears: What does it profit a man to gain the whole world but lose his very soul?

Steve Jobs, from things I have read about him, put his faith in the mix of Buddhist / Hindu religion, thus often referencing "karma" in his speeches. I have heard nothing about some last minute crying out the Jesus, and that is unfortunate.

No matter how much good he may have done from our perspective, Steve Jobs is in hell today... and that is tragic.

The vast great majority of people who will die today will be in hell today. What are we doing about it?

Krispy

Re: - posted by MaryJane, on: 2011/10/6 9:41

by MrBillPro on 2011/10/6 3:17:05

Aside from his faith, The World lost a GREAT innovator today. Thanks Steve for all your contributions. Rest in Peace.

MrBillPro you closed your post with "rest in peace" ? Can I ask you in all sincerity does it trouble you to say those words about someone whom you are not sure is with the LORD? I will admit, while I do not know what was on Steve Jobs heart when he died while he was alive he did not profess any belief in the LORD so I really struggle with that saying. Its hard for me because if he died in rebellion then he is not resting in peace and I guess I would not want to give false comfort or hope to any others who are still living and have not yielded their life to the LORD?

Its really a difficult thing for me that I am not sure about.

God Bless
mj

Re: - posted by MaryJane, on: 2011/10/6 9:42

Krispy wrote: The vast great majority of people who will die today will be in hell today. What are we doing about it?

Yes that is what is on my heart as well. Time is short and we should be about the LORDS Kingdom.

God bless
mj

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 9:43

MJ... I thought the same thing.

Krispy

Re: - posted by MrBillPro (), on: 2011/10/6 10:02

Mary, your putting the cart before the horse. No one knows how Steve went out, I have witnessed many "hard core" non believers death bed salvation's. The most high-profile death bed / last-minute conversion to Christ in the Bible is the case of the criminal crucified alongside Jesus Only moments before his own death, this criminal had been an unbelieving mocker of Christ. However, at the last moment the criminal repented and acknowledged Jesus as the heavenly King. The Lord gave him the blessed promise, "Today you shall be with Me in Paradise."

Mary, this should not trouble you at all until the facts are in, "and they may never be" I just believe as smart a man as he was, he knew there was a Jesus Christ, of course this is just my opinion.

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 10:09

You're talking over my head, but I believe you. I don't think Jobs created DOS though.

One thing I'm not thankful for is all the tens of thousands of American middle class jobs that he shipped to China.

Some good info on Jobs:

http://img.ibtimes.com/www/articles/20111006/226008_steve-jobs-death-2011-stevejobs-pancreatic-cancer-biological-father-syrian-reactions-how-did-steve-j.htm

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 10:18

Quote:
-----I will be honest the title of this thread bothered me. I know that I am probably being overly sensitive but we are speaking about someone's eternity. Just seems that we some times make lite of things that really are serious.

It is better to dwell in the wilderness than with a nagging and contentious woman.

I guess you missed the part where I said the most important thing is his eternal destination? Or do you have selective memory?

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 10:21

Quote:
-----While true that there is much good (humanly speaking) that we can glean from Steve Jobs brief life, and there is much good that his innovations provided... one thing keeps ringing in my ears: What does it profit a man to gain the whole world but lose his very soul?

Steve Jobs, from things I have read about him, put his faith in the mix of Buddhist / Hindu religion, thus often referencing "karma" in his speeches. I have heard nothing about some last minute crying out the Jesus, and that is unfortunate.

No matter how much good he may have done from our perspective, Steve Jobs is in hell today... and that is tragic.

The vast great majority of people who will die today will be in hell today. What are we doing about it?

Krispy

I can't believe that you and I completely agree about something, but we do.

Re: - posted by Theophila (), on: 2011/10/6 10:21

For all we know, he may be in heaven today. Or not. No sense getting hot under the collar over a matter that's not fully known.

Apparently, the folks he worked with believed he brought his absolute best to what he did.

Do the folks you work with believe the same about you?

Someone mentioned about being excellent stewards of our secular vocations. I totally agree with them.

Daniel was a holy man in Babylon AND he was excellent at what he did. May that be my testimony as well.

Re: - posted by MaryJane, on: 2011/10/6 10:22

Thank you MrBillPro for taking a moment to answer my question. I do understand that no one knows for sure but I guess what troubles me is how often we (meaning the population at large) say these kinds of things because it brings comfort to those who have lost someone but I wonder if by doing so we do them a disservice. I wonder if being honest and telling them the truth is not more an act of love... that we don't know where the person is but for their own eternity they should seek to repent and know JESUS. I guess that is what troubles me the most. I wonder if we don't offer comfort at the cost of their eternity??

Thank you for sharing your opinion with me and allowing me to do so also.

Have a blessed day
maryjane

edit: Forgive me these are just some thoughts on my heart I guess I have been thinking about my own dad and how things unfolded when he passed away. I pray I did not offend you in any way.

Re: - posted by MaryJane, on: 2011/10/6 10:25

by Endzone on 2011/10/6 4:18:05

Quote:
-----I will be honest the title of this thread bothered me. I know that I am probably being overly sensitive but we are speaking about someone's eternity. Just seems that we sometimes make light of things that really are serious.

It is better to dwell in the wilderness than with a nagging and contentious woman.

wow was that really called for? I said clearly that I was probably being overly sensitive and just sharing my thoughts that were on my heart. Don't know why you would post such a hurtful response to my post...

Pray you will have a good day in the LORD and just to be clear I was not trying to be nagging or contentious.

God bless you
maryjane

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 10:26

Theophila, he was a special person. Nobody seems to know much about him because he tried to keep his personal life secret. He seems to have no idea whatsoever though that Jesus Christ was the son of God. I wonder why that is.

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 10:31

Quote:
-----wow was that really called for? I said clearly that I was probably being overly sensitive and just sharing my thoughts that were on my heart. Don't know why you would post such a hurtful response to my post...

Pray you will have a good day in the LORD and just to be clear I was not trying to be nagging or contentious.

God bless you
maryjane

wow, yeah I guess it was because apparently you can't comprehend an entire paragraph at a time. Please go back and read my first post. I didn't change it one bit. I didn't edit it. I believe I said the most important issue was his eternal security--the very thing you accuse me of being insensitive about. I mean, I know you're not stupid.

Re: - posted by MaryJane, on: 2011/10/6 10:39

by Endzone on 2011/10/6 4:31:43

Quote:
-----wow was that really called for? I said clearly that I was probably being overly sensitive and just sharing my thoughts that were on my heart. Don't know why you would post such a hurtful response to my post...

Pray you will have a good day in the LORD and just to be clear I was not trying to be nagging or contentious.

God bless you
maryjane

wow, yeah I guess it was because apparently you can't comprehend an entire paragraph at a time. Please go back and read my first post. I didn't change it one bit. I didn't edit it. I believe I said the most important issue was his eternal security--the very thing you accuse me of being insensitive about. I mean, I know you're not stupid.

Edited after more prayer:

Endzone

I was not accusing you of anything and if my post came across that way please forgive me. I was sharing my heart that's why I said I am probably being overly sensitive. I humbly ask you to forgive me for not choosing my words better. In my attempt to make a comment on how the titled affected me and what is on my heart I seem to have offended you and I did not mean to. I really was not trying imply anything more about your post. I did read it in its entirety and yes you did speak to his eternity, I was not attempting to say that you did not.

With much love in my heart for you I have revised my reply after praying on this...

God Bless you and keep you
maryjane

Re: Steve Jobs just checked out, on: 2011/10/6 11:04

I've just watched a type of testimony of his life on TED and found it to be thought provoking.

http://www.ted.com/talks/steve_jobs_how_to_live_before_you_die.html

Re: Att. MaryJane - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2011/10/6 21:11

MaryJane,

Can you email me? I must have lost your email addy. Mine is in my profile.

Have a blessed day.

ginnyrose

Re: - posted by Enochh (), on: 2011/10/6 22:52

Just for the record. All you who want to worship at the altar of Jobs.... He was a devout Buddhist. I'm all glad you hold this man in high regard maybe you should have gone to witness to him when he was alive if you admired him so....oh you didn't admire him that much....yea he probably would have laughed at you and had Apple security escort you out....wouldn't want that. You hear the same "death bed conversion" (hopes) from Elvis fans too...Give me a break. Stop sugar coating everything and call it. He was a self professed Buddhist who relied on Karma. Man I gotta be politically Correct on SI now

Re: - posted by menderofnets (), on: 2011/10/6 23:05

sermonindex said:

"What is sad is you can run and have the most success with a business (one of the largest in the world) and have 100 of millions' in the bank and without Jesus Christ you are lost and have no hope. Oh the vanity of riches and money and any thing you can grasp in this earth. What only counts is faith (things unseen) in christ the son of God."

It reminds me of when Ravenhill spoke about what Mr Wesley left behind; a few spoons, a shawl, some other things and the Methodist Church. He received money, and look where it went!

Mr Jobs is being tributed for his service to technology. I hope that in eternity our own works bring glory to God.

Re: , on: 2011/10/6 23:59

There is NO SUCH THING AS UNconditional eternal security!

{eta}Been made aware that I hadn't addressed this more directly to what/where I meant - Endzone, THANK GOD you're still breathing and your heart is still working, unlike this other unsaved man, Jobs.

THANK GOD you haven't been banned for the excess vulgarity you've spewed over this forum since you've signed on and for your extreme nastiness to good Sisters and Brothers on this site, since you've signed on.

Thank GOD for this extra mercy shown in your direction from both GOD and the Brethren here and that no lengthy searches on all of your posts have been possible - as yet.

Thank GOD for the extra time and the unending witnesses that you can expose yourself to, through all of the Sermons and Godly posts on this Site and others, while you still have breath - in Jesus' Name!

Re: - posted by MaryJane, on: 2011/10/7 8:09

by ginnyrose on 2011/10/6 15:11:58

MaryJane,

Can you email me? I must have lost your email addy. Mine is in my profile.

Have a blessed day.

ginnyrose

Ginnyrose

I did not see your email in your profile when I checked this morning. Sorry. I will add mine to my profile for you to get.

God bless you
maryjane

Re: - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2011/10/7 9:05

QUOTE:

"Just for the record. All you who want to worship at the altar of Jobs.... He was a devout Buddhist. I'm all glad you hold this man in high regard maybe you should have gone to witness to him when he was alive if you admired him so....oh you didn't admire him that much....yea he probably would have laughed at you and had Apple security escort you out....wouldn't want that. You hear the same "death bed conversion" (hopes) from Elvis fans too...Give me a break. Stop sugar coating everything and call it. He was a self professed Buddhist who relied on Karma. Man I gotta be politically Correct on SI now"

Enochh, I agree with you 100%. I was thinking along the same lines....I was wondering why all these accolades for some one who was a Buddhist! Mother Teresa would get no praise on here but Steve Jobs did because of his work in electronics! Mother Teresa gets no praise and she worked with saving people in the gutter!

Now go figure!

I am not politically correct either, so move over Enochh...

Re: - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2011/10/7 9:19

QUOTE:

I did not see your email in your profile when I checked this morning.

I do not understand this because it is there, at least I see it.

In any case, MJ, I did email you. If you do not see it, check your junk box... For some reason some of my good emails go there - even Enid's will go there - don't know why unless it is from the UK!

ginnyrose

Re: - posted by Compton (), on: 2011/10/7 14:31

Quote:

----- I was wondering why all these accolades for someone who was a Buddhist!

Hi Ginny,

For my part, I felt the title of this thread reveals a disrespect for human beings, whether they are Buddhist or Christian or anything at all. Among news of Steve's Job's passing on the internet, this thread in Sermon Index pops up as singularly contemptuous and insensitive.

Accolades aside, I am just wondering why we felt the need to write his obituary in these forums in the first place? When we try to write other's people's narratives, (or obituaries) we are in effect trying to take ownership of their story and reputation. And while writing Job's story, we may acknowledge he wasn't a Christian, but there is no need to render him as "the rich man who had to learn the hard way that all his money won't save him."

Such a class-focused narrative reflects poorly on not only our intellects as Christians, but also our hearts. That we see Steve Job only in terms of his wealth indicates that we are the ones focused on money---not Steve Jobs.

And spiritual concern for people is an excellent thing, but when we use language such as "Steve Job's just checked out" within 24 hours of his death, we are communicating to the world we seem to care very little about people in general. My critique over this lack of respect shown to non-Christians is not "worshipping on the altar of Steve Jobs". Nor is it endorsing Buddhism. Indeed, the respect I am talking about isn't even endorsing Apple products. This is about showing common respect----demonstrating sensitivity to a life that just ended a day or so ago.

I hope this helps,

Mike

Re: - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2011/10/7 15:09

Thanks, Mike for your clear thinking, evaluation on this subject.

When I first read the title I thought of someone checking out of motel, not dying! OH....! It is disrespectful, even if the fellow was not a Christian. There is no excuse to be disrespectful to anyone...

Re: , on: 2011/10/7 15:18

Quote:

-----There is NO SUCH THING AS UNconditional eternal security!

Yea, it's too bad we have a god that we can't trust in. A god who offers us salvation, but isn't big enough to hold on to us. .. a god who makes us earn it if we're gonna keep it... but then HE takes all the credit for it.

What an (un)mighty god we serve...

Krispy

PS: Tongue planted firmly in cheek, of course.

Re: - posted by Compton (), on: 2011/10/7 15:36

Quote:
----- When I first read the title I thought of someone checking out of motel

I appreciate your sense of humor, Ginny. It keeps us young. (That's what I tell myself at least!)

Re: , on: 2011/10/7 15:51

Why hasn't it kept her young??

(just kidding, Ginny...)

Krispy

Re: , on: 2011/10/7 16:39

Thank you maryjane, and please forgive me for over reacting. It's so easy to do that on boards like this. Thank you so much for praying for me.

EZ

Re: , on: 2011/10/7 16:40

There is NO SUCH THING AS UNconditional eternal security!

{eta}Been made aware that I hadn't addressed this more directly to what/where I meant - Endzone, THANK GOD you're still breathing and your heart is still working, unlike this other unsaved man, Jobs.

Quote:
-----THANK GOD you haven't been banned for the excess vulgarity you've spewed over this forum since you've signed on and for your extreme nastiness to good Sisters and Brothers on this site, since you've signed on.

Thank GOD for this extra mercy shown in your direction from both GOD and the Brethren here and that no lengthy searches on all of your posts have been possible - as yet.

Thank GOD for the extra time and the unending witnesses that you can expose yourself to, through all of the Sermons and Godly posts on this Site and others, while you still have breath - in Jesus' Name!

Lady, are you demon possessed? You obviously aren't possessed by the Holy Spirit. Are you a witch?

Re: , on: 2011/10/7 16:45

Quote:

For my part, I felt the title of this thread reveals a disrespect for human beings, whether they are Buddhist or Christian or anything at all. Among news of Steve's Job's passing on the internet, this thread in Sermon Index pops up as singularly contemptuous and insensitive.

Accolades aside, I am just wondering why we felt the need to write his obituary in these forums in the first place? When we try to write other's people's narratives, (or obituaries) we are in effect trying to take ownership of their story and reputation. And while writing Job's story, we may acknowledge he wasn't a Christian, but there is no need to render him as "the rich man who had to learn the hard way that all his money won't save him."

Such a class-focused narrative reflects poorly on not only our intellects as Christians, but also our hearts. That we see Steve Job only in terms of his wealth indicates that we are the ones focused on money---not Steve Jobs.

And spiritual concern for people is an excellent thing, but when we use language such as "Steve Job's just checked out" within 24 hours of his death, we are communicating to the world we seem to care very little about people in general. My critique over this lack of respect shown to non-Christians is not "worshipping on the altar of Steve Jobs". Nor is it endorsing Buddhism. Indeed, the respect I am talking about isn't even endorsing Apple products. This is about showing common respect---demonstrating sensitivity to a life that just ended a day or so ago.

I hope this helps,

Mike

Yea Compton you pathetic wiennie. It helps me understand what a wimp you are. It helps me understand you probably couldn't get a date to save your life and your only girlfriends are on Sermon Index. Insensitivity my @ss. Why don't you go play with your boyfriend? Man I'm sick of wimpy pathetic Christians like you.

Re: - posted by ccchhrrriiisss (), on: 2011/10/7 18:05

Endzone,

This is completely uncalled for. You don't have to agree on peculiarities...but your comments are extremely ungodly.

"Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man."
- Matthew 15:11 KJV

Re: - posted by ginnyrose (), on: 2011/10/7 18:25

Endzone;

"Yea Compton you pathetic wiennie. It helps me understand what a wimp you are. It helps me understand you probably couldn't get a date to save your life and your only girlfriends are on Sermon Index. Insensitivity my @ss. Why don't you go play with your boyfriend? Man I'm sick of wimpy pathetic Christians like you."

Endzone, shame on you!!! Do you not know that Compton is a male and one of the mods! Your language is all uncalled for or...methinks you do not know the LORD because if you did it would clean up your speech! If you were my child I would take you to the woodshed and give you a whoopin'

And another thing - are you and Trekker the one and same person?

You need to get down on your knees and have a heart to talk with the LORD Jesus!

Re: - posted by Creation7, on: 2011/10/7 18:32

Quote:

-----Yea Compton you...

Please, calm yourself!
Anywhoo...

Matthew 5:44--"But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you;"

So, may God bless you, Endzone.

i am back Endzone, on: 2011/10/7 18:56

this is neil, and i am back on this "forum", if only to make sure you receive the appropriate sanction which is to be banned. How dare you speak to one of my dearest brothers, a Godly, Jesus loving man, i have had many a great fellowship with!

just this very thread has been a frivolous stench in itself and you pollute it further by speaking the words of your darkened heart and spirit?, Truth be known, YOU were one of the many reasons i found it necessary to leave.

But i will not countenance such a trophy of Grace as Mike Compton being verbally scourged by you, THE LORD REBUKE YOU.

now, moderators, your course in this posters involvement is quite clear, i pray you have eyes to see what must be done. be glad Endzone that a fiber optic cable separates us. neil

Re: , on: 2011/10/7 19:51

Endzone, you sure could dish it out but couldn't take it.

Sad for you and you'll stay in our prayers. Brother Mike Compton will probably now pray for you the most. He and his dear wife and children.

Re: - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2011/10/7 20:21

Quote:
-----I will be honest the title of this thread bothered me. I know that I am probably being overly sensitive but we are speaking about someone's eternity. Just seems that we some times make light of things that really are serious.

Sister, you are not being over serious at all. You have the right heart.

Quote:
-----Yea Compton you pathetic wiennie. It helps me understand what a wimp you are. It helps me understand you probably couldn't get a date to save your life and your only girlfriends are on Sermon Index. Insensitivity my @ss. Why don't you go play with your boyfriend? Man I'm sick of wimpy pathetic Christians like you.

We are banning "endzone" from the forums for such speech and behaviour in this thread including the comment above that should not be spoken by Christians on a Christian forum or even a secular one.

This thread is being locked.