A new study published by scientists who examined diabetes mellitus type 2, reproductive factors, and breast cancer found a statistically significant association showing a 2.86-fold increased breast cancer risk from one induced abortion.

The study, led by Lilit Khachatryan, included researchers from Johns Hopkins School of Public Health and the University of Pennsylvania. Khachatryan is from the Department of Public Health, American University of Armenia, Yerevan, Armenia; Robert Scharpf is from the Johns Hopkins School of Public Health and Sarah Kagan is from the School of Nursing at the University of Pennsylvania. ...

I also highly recommend one check out the bloggers listed on the right side of this article. If it doesn't about make you vomit...Still, we are to live one day at a time and fight the evil we encounter presently. But it will serve us well to be aware of the tactics, logic the devil uses to question God's command to reproduce. The fact the devil has allowed the gov to finance illegitimacy and now will work to remove it is very revealing of their strategy.

We live in dangerous times. While the economy looks scary, the strategy the gov may yet use to limit family size, the flaunting of immorality, making it desirable makes the entire scenario look like it is being masterminded by a superior power - it can't all be initiated by one particular person. There must be a system at work....
