Saints,

This seems like a good event to invite interested friends to in Atlanta:

The gospel encompasses the message and mission of God. John Piper suggests that God is the gospel, and if that statement stands as truth— we should take seriously the message and mission of God. We have been saved by God's grace and sent out on a mission. However, if we get the gospel wrong, we get God wrong. If we have a skewed view of God and His gospel, our mission will be flawed. How should pastors and Christians balance our message and mission in this postmodern age? Should we embrace tolerance and water down the gospel in order to seem non-threatening and "normal" among fellow Americans? Join us as we examine this extremely important issue together at the G3 Conference in January of 2013!
