

Miracles that follow the plow :: Prayer commitment for forum*Prayer commitment for forum - posted by beekpr, on: 2012/9/7 21:49

After following Greg's timely threads regarding the spirit in which members post comments on the forum, a thought came to me which I would like to share. Since every true work of God is both born and sustained in prayer, I feel that there ought to be a nucleus of members committed to lifting up the moderators and the forum on a daily basis in intercession. The forum has a great potential for good if the Spirit of God is the Force behind it-consequently, we need to call on God to grant just that. With the help of the Lord I wish to consecrate myself as one of those engaged in this part of the work which we are in together.

Re: Prayer commitment for forum - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2012/9/8 11:13

Quote:
-----I feel that there ought to be a nucleus of members committed to lifting up the moderators and the forum on a daily basis in intercession. The forum has a great potential for good if the Spirit of God is the Force behind it-consequently, we need to call on God to grant just that. With the help of the Lord I wish to consecrate myself as one of those engaged in this part of the work which we are in together.

this is a tremendous idea I really trust more will commit to daily praying for the website ministry. I believe there are already 100's who do this but may God raise up 1000's more, this is the only reason this ministry is successful because of prayer to the Lord.

Re: - posted by Areadymind (), on: 2012/9/8 11:27

I would love to commit, but I am terrible at keeping these kinds of commitments because I have such a pot-shot memory. I will however try to remember to pray more, if you often brought this up, it would go a long way to helping me remember until it became a habit.

Re: - posted by mama27, on: 2012/9/8 15:00

I, too, am unable to commit to DAILY praying, but I am asking the Lord to remind me to keep this forum covered in prayer. I appreciate this site SO MUCH....Bless you!