Server Coding, PHP help - for SermonIndex - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2012/9/11 12:05

Saints,

If there are a few brothers and sisters that have experience in apache, coding and php coding it would be a blessing to have some help. We need to make a few changes and it would be a great to get some counsel and other opinions before we do it and in some cases some help.

You can email me at: sermonindex@gmail.com

if you know of someone that can help please forward them this message.

I don't know anything about such security issues, but I have often thought that it would be good if several people around the globe could be doing a backup of the website on a regular basis ... just in case something were to happen in our section of the world ... someone would be able to contact Greg and and give him a current copy of the website from another part of the world that didn't get infected.

These messages are treasures.

P.S. Perhaps this thought is a carryover from this discussion: https://www.sermonindex.net/modules/newbb/viewtopic.php?topic_id=46543&forum=48

Sent a message. Can also provide backup space on my hosting account too if required as suggested by bro. Lordoitagain.

Excellent thought, we need to work on this with a few ministries or brothers and sisters to provide the space on their servers.

What country is your hosting company located in dear brother?

If anyone knows apache specifically and can code PHP that would be most helpful please contact me: sermonindex@gmail.com
