Hi all, I'll be flying in and out of Toronto on the third Sunday in June with an 18hr layover, and would like to spend some of that time at a good church. Does anyone have a recommendation? Also wouldn't mind to meet with a sister (or a couple) over coffee, or for a walk, or..... Like I said, I have 18 hours to kill! :)

Hello,

This is a very hard questions to answer! Toronto has many diverse churches form different ethnicies and denominations. Good church can mean different things for different people.

Here are a few that I personally find are "good" for different reasons.

<http://www.freechurch.ca/> --> another excellent church meets in the same building at the same time as the evening service its for the homeless specifically and is very warm and full of the grace

Brother,

I would recommend either:

Knox Presbyterian Church - <http://www.knox.org> (this was the church I went to for 4 years after my new birth experience with the Lord).

People Church - <http://www.thepeopleschurch.ca> (this is a famous church with Charles Price a tremendous speaker and godly man).

Thank you all, this is helpful! And it's true: the questions of what is a "good church" would merit a post all by itself. For me, in this case, it means a welcoming place where I will be taught from the scriptures by a godly speaker and be part of worship that pleases the heart of God.

Btw: I'm a sister, not a brother, or I wouldn't ask the way I did :)
