Clearing up some confusion: so if you say, for example, that "sermon downloads" are ranked first...does that mean that of all the phrases that the search-engine-users type in, "sermon downloads" is the #1 most commonly searched phrase? Sounds kinda stupid now that I've typed it out, but o well. I'd rather get an answer to a stupid question then remain stupid. ;-)

It means that if someone types in "sermon downloads" they get a list of sites and I have just found out where www.sermonindex.net is in that search. So if I say that this site ranked 3rd, that means it was the third site from the top on the search results page.

Here is a small update as of Oct 13/03:

(<http://www.dogpile.com>) [Image: <https://www.sermonindex.net/images/forum/search/dogpile.jpg>]

"audio sermons" - Ranked 20th (up 5 spots)

"mp3 sermons" - Ranked 3rd (same)

"free sermons" - Ranked 23th (down 3)

"audio preaching" - Ranked 20th (down 5)

"sermon downloads" - Ranked 16th (up 4)

This just gives you an idea on how slowly on some keywords the site is climbing closer to the top. What helps I believe is cross-linking. If you have a Christian website please link to www.sermonindex.net. Please also pray that God would increase the amount of people coming to the site for His glory.
