I know that we are very serious on SI most of the time, but I thought maybe I could add some humor.

I just found this audio of a call from an employee to his boss at Jack-in-the-Box. Someone had it on their xanga journal and it is hilarious and amazing that it was recorded.

I was in tears right along with the guy.

If you'd like to listen it's at this link: <http://www.xanga.com/home.aspx?user=NCDreamCenter>

You have to go down to the bottom of the page to the yellow post (big yellow square) and you will see a place to click on the audio. It gives some background above it.

These are the facts: "Possibly the greatest voicemail message ever recorded. A Dallas Jack-in-the-Box employee called it to his boss to explain why he was late for a meeting... and as he began to leave the message he witnessed an accident. He then breaks into play-by-play as the man involved in the accident begins to lash out against the old women he hit. The women then attack HIM, much to the amusement of our commentator. HYSTERICAL... it was forwarded so much within Jack-in-the-Box corporate ranks that it crashed their voicemail server. Enjoy."

Sorry, it does say 'hell' in it once.

If anyone thinks it is not appropriate, we can delete it.

I am still in tears everytime i listen to it. I can just see those little old ladies. :)
