In a move that's being described as chasing "the whims of political correctness," the Disney Channel reportedly will feature a "married" lesbian couple on a popular kids sitcom in the coming season.

"It's a disappointment to millions of Americans that Disney would choose to become a groundbreaker in immorality," commented Movieguide, the organization headed by Christian media critic Ted Baehr. "New concepts of morality have had a very negative impact on marriage, families, and children."

Not too surprising, Disney has always structured its stories around dysfunctional family units. Always children, never Mom and Dad.

Even Donald Duck had children but they were introduced as his nephews and no actual parents.

War on family values goes way back, probably to the Garden...
