I don't often get furious about the idiocies that daily emerge from the Common Core universe, but a recent statement by a lead writer of the Common Core math standards, Jason Zimba, got me there.

What I found interesting was this white lady's revulsion of white people. There is some kind of movement starting up with various groups such as Black Lives Matter for instance that are totally against anything "white". Isn't this just plain racism ? I did not know that Common Core supporters and Common Core itself were racist in this way. So that was a very interesting revelation from that article.

Blanket judgments and determinations against an entire race usually speak of an agenda, and nothing more.
