

News and Current Events :: FaceTime prayer at noon Central, anyone?

FaceTime prayer at noon Central, anyone? - posted by dolfan (), on: 2016/6/1 12:31

I'm going to stay in my office and pray for a while at noon today. Anybody want to FaceTime and pray together for a little bit then? (I'm in the Central time zone.) Of course, you can only have one on one FaceTime, no groups.

Re: FaceTime prayer at noon Central, anyone? - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2016/6/1 12:54

Saints,

I would recommend having these type of calls with those you are already in relationship with privately and trust and not make a call out publicly for this. As many people all around the world read this forum and also use the website.

I think it is a wonderful idea brother and surely there are a few brethren you are connected with who would be interested in committing to pray some lunch times via facetime.

Re: - posted by dolfan (), on: 2016/6/1 12:59

Wow, ok. Sorry for that.

Re: - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2016/6/1 13:06 brother Tim.

I believe it is a wonderful idea, I just wanted to add that caution. I have heard many stories of saints connecting in this way and problems happening, sisters feeling uncomfortable etc. The best and safest way is through already established relationships. It is wonderful that saints are able to have these through email communication even. And some through meeting at SermonIndex conferences.

Re: - posted by dolfan (), on: 2016/6/1 13:22

I will work in making those connections if I --- hopefully! --- make to ATL on the 18th. No problem.

Re: - posted by Pnutty (), on: 2016/6/1 14:01

Ridiculous.

I run into strangers and strike up conversations all the time in the real world. Only on the internet can I push a button and they disappear.

Id meet with you Tim. I likely only have a weeks worth of internet left.