Quotation from OP article...

What is going to be created will effectively be a god, he said. It's not a god in the sense that it makes lightning or causes hurricanes. But if there is something a billion times smarter than the smartest human, what else are you going to call it?

Plot synopsis from Colossus 1966 science fiction movie about a computer who rules the world...

Colossus later announces that the world, now freed from war, will create a new human millennium that will raise mankind to new heights, but only under its absolute rule. Colossus informs Forbin that "freedom is an illusion" and that "in time you will come to regard me not only with respect and awe, but with love". Forbin responds, "Never!"

Be careful what you wish for...

From an interview by the BBC with Stephen Hawking...

He told the BBC: "The development of full artificial intelligence could spell the end of the human race."

Again. Be careful what you wish for.

(So will there be a John Connor who will deliver us from Skynet.) Just kidding folks. In case you're wondering who John Connor was go back to Terminator.

This thing might be a glorified calculator, but it will never come close to replacing human consciousness let alone anything faintly resembling God.

The only real use for a supercomputer of this kind is for control and categorizing human beings for whatever slavery the owners of the computer have in mind.

There is nothing new here, nothing that hasn't been done in Egypt or Babylon or Assyria...or Communist Russia or Communist China...and Humanist America...the dehumanizing of human beings into slaved=cattle for exploitation.

Pick your clique' this is the joke humanity plays on itself.
