"So I try to store my mind only with things that will enable me to teach the Bible with clarity. If I have one ambition, it is to be clear. And sometimes I have worked at it for years. There are truths in the Bible that were confusing to me years ago . But I've plowed away and worked at it, whittled it down until in most cases now what I teach, I will be able to teach with simplicity and with clarity. My aim is not to confuse people. Sometimes at the end of a sermon, someone will come to me and say, "Brother Prince, that was a deep message." And I say, "Lord, what did I do wrong now?" People have said so metimes about me when I teach they think, "Well, why didn't I know that?" Of course it's obvious. That is my aim."
