

News and Current Events :: Is Luis Palau the Next Billy Graham?

Is Luis Palau the Next Billy Graham? - posted by sermonindex (), on: 2005/10/10 17:48

[Image: https://www.sermonindex.net/images/forum/2004/may/featured_news.gif]

Oct. 8, 2005 — It doesn't look like a church. It's a huge party — a festival — for God. And you've probably never heard of the headliner: Luis Palau.

Palau, 70, has been preaching since he was a 12-year-old in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

But for the past six years, he's been putting on these massive festivals with Christian rock bands, a kids' play land and skateboards — all suggestions from his adult sons.

"I thought, what's skateboarding? I mean, I'm a grandpa, what do I do know?" said Palau. "And then, suddenly, the crowds were there and they began to double, then triple, now 10 times what we used to have before."

Some believe that Palau, who is already known as the Billy Graham of Latin America, may take over the mantle of America's leading evangelist.

Re: Is Luis Palau the Next Billy Graham?, on: 2005/10/12 9:21

praise God for people like that.

Re: Is Luis Palau the Next Billy Graham? - posted by markm, on: 2005/10/12 14:56

I grew up in the church and picked up the lingo. But, it was at a Luis Palau event that I realized I had no idea what the phrase "personal relationship with Jesus Christ" really meant.

Praise God for all the workers He brings out to talk one on one with people at an event like that.

Re: Is Luis Palau the Next Billy Graham? - posted by philologos (), on: 2005/10/12 15:12

Quote:
-----Some believe that Palau, who is already known as the Billy Graham of Latin America, may take over the mantle of America's leading evangelist.

At 70 years of age, it might be little late?

Re:, on: 2005/10/14 9:51

might is a loose word 8-) :-P